

INTERNATIONAL Herald Tribune

PUBLISHED WITH THE NEW YORK TIMES AND THE WASHINGTON POST

The World's Daily Newspaper

R

London, Saturday-Sunday, February 6-7, 1999

No. 36,058

TODAY: MONEY
Quarterly Scoreboard Page 15

King Hussein's Long Reign Draws to a Close

Monarch Is Clinically Dead; Family Deciding on Last Step

By Lee Hockstader
Washington Post Service

AMMAN, Jordan — Wasted by cancer and sustained only by life-support, King Hussein lay dying Friday as a nation that has known no other leader for 46 years braced for his death.

The mood of many Jordanians was as bleak as the skies, which shrouded the city in a cloak of menacing gray clouds and soaked it with a raw, driving rain.

"If King Hussein needs my blood, I'm ready to give him my blood," said Imam Abu, 52, his voice thick with emotion after he prayed for the monarch at Al Hussein mosque in Amman. "I would give my life to save his. God bless him."

King Hussein, 63, arrived in Amman on Friday morning, his liver and kidney failing after his body rejected an 11th-hour bone marrow transplant on Thursday from the plane on a stretcher, he reached for the hand of his American-born wife, Queen Noor, witnesses reported, and was rushed to the hospital in an ambulance at the head of a heavily guarded 70-vehicle convoy.

Hours later, unnamed officials reported that the king, one of the century's most durable rulers, was clinically dead.

Reuters reported that the king's family was meeting to decide when to shut off the equipment that kept him breathing.

The Jordanian government insisted he remained under intensive treatment, his situation critical.

Queen Noor was at her husband's bedside at the King Hussein Medical Center in Amman, as were many other members of his large family, including his eldest son and heir, Prince Abdullah, and his brother, Prince Hassan.

As the supreme authority in this country for nearly half a century, the king was a master of grand and deft public gestures.

Last month, after six months of cancer treatment in the United States, he showed that he retained his touch when he returned to a hero's welcome, promptly dismissed his designated successor of 34 years, Prince Hassan, and replaced him with the politically untested Prince Abdullah.

But on Friday he came home without pomp, clinging to life. His countrymen spent the Muslim day of rest awaiting news of his condition and state-run television broadcast solemn prayers to his extraordinarily eventful reign.

There was footage of the grinning teenage monarch shaking hands with President Dwight Eisenhower soon after he ascended to the throne in 1952.

And there was footage of the king looking gaunt and hairless, but still grinning, last October when he attended the White House signing ceremony of the latest Middle East peace deal between Israelis and Palestinians.

"There is nervousness, and something we can call fear for the future," said Amjad Zoubi, 28, a teacher who prayed for the monarch's life at Amman's central mosque.

Across Jordan, the atmosphere was somber. Some people cried. Others took offense when foreign journalists asked what would become the kingdom following the king's demise. One well-to-do woman in her 30s stopped wearing cosmetics as a gesture of respect and sadness.

The grief was heartfelt and common, but not universal. More than half Jordan's population is Palestinian, and they remember the king's bloody crackdown against the Palestine Liberation Organization in 1970, which led to the organization's expulsion.

Near Amman's main mosque, one young man who was asked about the king glanced around furtively and gave a curt response. "I am happy the king is dying." He then walked away quickly.

Supportive Words

Voices of support for the king resounded around the Middle East on Friday. The Associated Press reported from Cairo.

Attending an international aid conference in Germany, the Palestinian leader, Yasser Arafat, said, "We know

See JORDAN, Page 4

Women weeping Friday outside the King Hussein Medical Center in Amman, where the Jordanian monarch was hospitalized on the verge of death, as men prayed for him at a mosque.

Associated Press

As Iranians Mark 1979 Revolution, Many Ask Why

By Douglas Jehl
New York Times Service

TEHRAN — These are the "days of dawn," the 10 heady days that brought Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini back from exile, saw the collapse of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime and are celebrated this week across Iran in observance of the 20th anniversary of the Islamic revolution.

Again and again, state television has replayed grainy footage of Ayatollah Khomeini's arrival from France, as he is escorted step by step down the stairs of an Air France jet. Again and again, reverent tales are retold, like a children's story in which the ayatollah is introduced as "the good imam who rid Iran of the evil shah."

Despite the ingrained lessons of the revolution, a teenage girl asked Ayatollah Khomeini's successor in a televised meeting the other day, "Why did the Islamic revolution take place?"

The question reflects a widening gap between Iranians and the defining event of their country's recent past. More than half of Iran's 68 million people have been born since the events that toppled a king and stunned the world: millions more are barely old enough to remember them.

And the young are not the only ones asking questions. The revolution that put power into the hands of Shiite Muslim clerics enjoyed broad popular support at the time. But today, disillusioned by a generation of experience and emboldened by new political ferment, millions of Iranians from all walks of life feel adrift, regarding the revolution as no longer relevant to today's problems.

In scores of interviews around Iran in the last two months, those were sentiments voiced by clerks, cleaners, farmers, professionals and others in big cities like Tehran and rural areas in the farmland around the northwestern city of Tabriz.

"We were like sheep, following others," one of them, Abil, a 60-year-old farmer wearing striped trousers, a plaid jacket and a shabby black felt hat, said as he recalled the revolution, which he once backed with enthusiasm. "Whenever the shepherd led, we followed."

Sadiq Zibakallam, a political scientist who frequently lectures around the country, said he was encountering a similar sense of confusion. "One of the most common questions that I come across is, 'Where are we going?'" Mr. Zibakallam said. "That reflects the anxiety and helplessness that many Iranians are going through."

See IRAN, Page 5

Under Strains, Indonesia Ponders a Federal State

Bid to East Timor Linked to Idea on Local Rule

By Michael Richardson
International Herald Tribune

JAKARTA — An Indonesian proposal to consider independence for East Timor if the disputed territory refuses to accept autonomy is a high-risk strategy that could encourage other restive parts of Indonesia — the world's largest island-nation — to break away or loosen the bonds holding it together, in the view of some analysts and officials in neighboring countries.

Adding to such concerns, the governor of Aceh Province on the island of Sumatra was quoted Friday by the news agency Antara as saying he believed that the best way of ensuring Indonesia's unity was to make it a federal state.

Along with East Timor and Irian Jaya Province, which occupies the western half of New Guinea, Aceh has become a hotbed of separatist agitation since student-led demonstrations in May forced President Suharto to resign.

His departure ended 32 years of highly centralized authoritarian rule, leaving a weak government and disgruntled military to cope with a rising tide of political violence, sectarian killings and lawlessness exacerbated by the worst recession in a generation.

In the latest such clash, the police opened fire as they tried to disperse a crowd that had gathered to listen to a separatist speech by members of the Free Aceh Movement in Ili Cut, 1,530 kilometers (930 miles) northwest of Jakarta.

Village search parties pulled five bodies from a river on Friday, raising the known death toll in the clash to 18, a human-rights group said.

Regional unrest in staunchly Muslim Aceh is rooted in centuries-old resistance to central rule. The governor, Syamsuddin Mahmud, reportedly said that replacing Indonesia's unitary state with a federal structure would give the provinces more power to protect their culture and control their resources.

In recent years, Aceh and some of the 26 other provinces have voiced increasingly bitter complaints as they watched the central government exploit their oil, gas, minerals and timber but give relatively little back in return.

In an effort to calm these simmering resentments, the government of President B. J. Habibie is planning to give provinces more power over their affairs and more control of their wealth.

Ryass Rasyid, the Home Affairs Ministry's director-general for regional autonomy, said this week that a draft law on decentralization would be submitted to Mr. Habibie soon.

"This law is to democratize local governments, to give them more authority to make decisions in the interest of their community," he said. "We want the local governments to be powerful enough to make decisions on investments and other issues, except in monetary, defense, foreign and judicial policies."

Mr. Rasyid said the draft law would, at the least, double the budget of every province as Jakarta reduced its share of revenues from the regions. "For the resource-rich provinces of Aceh, Irian Jaya, East Kalimantan, South Sumatra and Riau, they will get more, maybe a

See TIMOR, Page 5

The Dollar
New York	Friday 4 P.M.	previous close
Euro	1.1263	1.1335
Pound	1.6333	1.645
Yen	113.22	112.025
DM	1.737	1.7255
FF	5.8256	5.787
Dollars per pound and per euro
The Dow
	Friday close	percent change
— 0.28	9,304.34	Unch.
S&P 500
— 0.08	1,239.40	— 0.73%
Nasdaq
— 36.43	2,373.64	— 1.51%

Board Ousts BMW Chief and His Heir

By John Schmid
International Herald Tribune

FRANKFURT — The maker of BMW autos announced the departures of its two top executives Friday in a rare German boardroom revolt that analysts said was triggered by heavy losses at the company's British Rover auto-making subsidiary.

Persistent problems at Rover forced the exit of Bayerische Motoren Werke AG's chief executive, Bernd Pischetsrieder, 50, and his heir apparent on the company board, Wolfgang Reitzle, 49. The two men were long-time rivals, and both had worked at BMW for more than two decades.

Although Mr. Pischetsrieder's job has been the subject of intense speculation, the development shocked the auto industry because of Mr. Reitzle's reputation as a talented and visionary manager whose skills have been crucial in recent years in polishing BMW's sporty and youthful image.

The shake-up leaves a relatively unknown BMW board member, Joachim Milberg, 56, as the head of Europe's most prestigious automakers.

BMW's supervisory board made the decisions at an extraordinary meeting at its Munich headquarters. In a sign of possible dissent, the meeting lasted into the evening. BMW stock closed Friday at 682 euros ($770), up 23, on hopes Mr.

Pischetsrieder would be ousted.

In a brief statement, BMW said that both Mr. Pischetsrieder and Mr. Reitzle had resigned without giving reasons. The board meeting had been called to discuss Rover, the company said.

Simultaneous exits by two top executives are virtually unknown in German business.

"It is a very rare situation when board members, especially the chairman, are kicked out when they still have a contract," said Juergen Roethig, an analyst in Frankfurt at B. Metzler & Co. bank.

From the moment Mr. Milberg begins his job, his most pressing task will

See BMW, Page 4

Lewinsky Testimony: 'Managers' Meet Their Match

By Richard A. Serrano
Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON — In her deposition this week for President Bill Clinton's impeachment trial, Monica Lewinsky faced deftly with prosecutors over key aspects of the case, referred them again and again to her earlier grand jury testimony and said she thinks Mr. Clinton is "intelligent" and a good president.

"I have mixed feelings" about Mr. Clinton now, Ms. Lewinsky said, according to a transcript of her four-hour deposition released Friday. But she parried further questions about her sentiments, as well as many other subjects, with short and hedged answers, leaving the prosecutors frustrated and without substantial new evidence in the case.

The Senate voted Thursday not to call Ms. Lewinsky to testify in person. Instead, portions of her videotaped testimony will be used Saturday in arguments by House prosecutors, giving Americans their first opportunity to see her tell parts of her story.

The trial was in recess Friday so that both sides could prepare for the Saturday presentations. Closing arguments will be held Monday, and then deliberations, with a vote expected next Friday or sooner on conviction or acquittal of the president on the articles of impeachment. Republicans and Democrats agree that the 67 votes needed to convict and remove Mr. Clinton are lacking.

In Ms. Lewinsky's deposition on Monday, after she dodged a question about the early stages of her relationship with Mr. Clinton, Representative Ed Bryant, Republican of Tennessee, and the House prosecutor leading the session, remarked in exasperation: "We're obviously going to have to talk about some things for eight hours here, or else we can go home."

"Sounds good to me," she replied.

Ms. Lewinsky's 170-page deposition and the transcripts of similar sessions with Vernon Jordan Jr., a friend of the president, and Sidney Blumenthal, a White House aide, make clear that the prosecutors managed to coax some details and interesting rhetorical exchanges from the three but fell far short of the kind of bombshell needed to deflect the impeachment process from an expected acquittal vote.

At the same time, the witnesses did not back away from previous accounts that are troublesome for Mr. Clinton or other figures in the case.

Ms. Lewinsky again suggested that Mr. Jordan seemed to know that she and the president had an intimate relationship when Mr. Jordan was trying to find her a job in New York. At one point she recounted that Mr. Jordan had told her: "Your problem is, and don't deny it, you're in love with him."

Mr. Jordan has denied telling her that, but Ms. Lewinsky recalled it during the deposition at the Mayflower Hotel in the

See TESTIMONY, Page 4

Serbs Bar 2 Kosovo Delegates at Airport

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Serbian authorities refused to let some members of a Kosovo Albanian delegation fly to France on Friday for peace talks because they lacked passports.

The other ethnic Albanians refused to go without their colleagues, putting in jeopardy the scheduled Saturday start of negotiations at a chateau outside Paris.

A French envoy, Jacques Huntzinger, said the Serbs would not allow rebel representatives to enter the Pristina airport when they learned two of them did not have passports.

In addition, it was reported the Serbs would not allow four members of the Kosovo Liberation Organization to enter the airport.

In Paris, the chief Serbian negotiator threatened to derail the talks before they began, saying he would not hold discussions with "terrorists," a reference to the Kosovo Liberation Army.

Deputy Prime Minister Ratko Markovic said that his delegation would not talk to KLA representatives directly or through the three international mediators set to oversee the talks.

"The West cannot force one state to negotiate with terrorists," he said. "We are ready to face the consequences."

Mr. Markovic said Belgrade was ready to talk with the moderate ethnic Albanian leader, Ibrahim Rugova, saying: "We accept Dr. Rugova as a negotiating partner. He is the leader of the big ethnic Albanian party and he is the right person to negotiate with."

The six-power Contact Group on the former Yugoslavia has given the warring sides seven days to hammer out a pact, and less than a week after that to finalize the details.

If they fail, NATO has threatened punitive air strikes and other sanctions to end a conflict that diplomats say could engulf other parts of the Balkans and southeastern Europe.

Christopher Hill, the special U.S. envoy for Kosovo, said at a briefing in Paris it was essential that the Kosovo members be allowed to attend the talks in France.

"We think it is absolutely critical that the entire delegation gets to Paris," he said. "We will insist that this be the case. We would expect that they would leave this evening."

Diplomats stressed that the sponsoring group, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, would not have undertaken the travel mission without approval from Belgrade.

See KOSOVO, Page 4

AGENDA

New Jobs Keep U.S. Economy Humming

The U.S. unemployment rate was unchanged in January, at 4.3 percent, the government reported Friday, as the economy added 243,000 new jobs.

The job growth was greater than economists had predicted and was another sign that the economic expansion was on track to continue in the months ahead.

Job gains accelerated to an average of more than 273,000 in the past three months, government figures showed, up from an average of 219,000 in the previous three months.

The percentage of the U.S. population holding jobs increased to a record 67.4 percent in January, which Michael Englund, chief economist at Standard & Poor's MMS unit, called another big lift for the economy.

Based on the report, Mr. Englund increased his forecast for first-quarter growth to a 2.8 percent annual rate from 2.5 percent. "Americans have jobs and they're going to keep spending," he said.

The job gains in January were led by services, engineering and management services continued their strong growth, but there were fewer jobs in manufacturing, Page 9.

Books	Page 18.
Crossword	Page 18.
Opinion	Page 8.
Sports	Pages 18-19.
The Internet	Page 6.
The IHT online	www.ihl.com

Newstand Prices

Bahrain	1,000 BD	Malta	55 c
Cyprus	€ 1.00	Nigeria	1200 N
Denmark	17 DK	Oman	1,250 OR
Finland	12.00 FM	Qatar	10.00 QR
Gibraltar	€ 0.85	Rep. Ireland	IR £1.10
Great Britain	£1.00	Saudi Arabia	10 SR
Egypt	€ 5.50	S. Africa	R16 R
Jordan	1,250 JD	U.A.E.	10.00 Dh
Kenya	K. Sh. 160	U.S. M.	€ 1.20
Kuwait	700 Fils	Zimbabwe	2m. $40.00

AT&T

9 770294 805162

Canadian Arctic's New Fare: Contaminated Seal and Canned Spaghetti

By Anthony DePalma
New York Times Service

IGLOOLIK, Northwest Territories — It was early on a Monday morning, another gray start to a gray day in the Canadian Arctic. But thinking ahead to providing a hot, nutritious meal for his family later that day and through the week, Serapio Ittusardjuat was already defrosting a seal.

It was an entire ringed seal, about three feet long, that the Inuit hunter had caught in the fertile waters around the island of Igloolik and then allowed to freeze in the 30-below temperatures until he needed it.

But Ittusardjuat (pronounced ee-too-sard-zoo-wat) was only dimly aware that the seal was probably contaminated with dangerous substances like the pesticide DDT and industrial compounds like PCBs, which are released into the air all over the earth and drift north.

Once they hit the cold polar regions, the contaminants settle. They easily seep into the Arctic food chain, and are especially concentrated in sea mammals like seals that have a thick layer of fat that stores the dangerous compounds. Scientists have known about the contaminants for some time, and are most concerned about the effects on babies and the unborn in the north. But they have not advised the Inuit to change their diets.

Although the eastern Canadian Arctic is developing rapidly, and will officially become Canada's third territory in a few weeks, there still are few alternatives to traditional food in an area as isolated as this one, 1,200 miles (1,900 kilometers) from the North Pole.

What is available at Igloolik's only two stores tends to be convenience foods, TV dinners and sugary prepared items that are common in the south but have only recently been introduced in the north.

"Heart disease and kidney disease were almost nonexistent in the north," said David Stone, chairman of a federal government committee on northern contaminants. "But when these people take on a southern diet, they end up getting the same diseases as you or I, and it tends to be worse."

It would not do much good to try to place traditional foods off-limits for people like Ittusardjuat, who hunts every week, often heading to Baffin Island, where he can shoot caribou for his family, and for others who cannot hunt.

"I heard about that but I'm not too worried," he said, referring to the reports of contaminants found in the food chain. "I guess if I shot a caribou near the sludge pond, it might be different and I might not eat it. Otherwise, I don't think it's a problem."

The Inuit's ability to exploit their surroundings has allowed them to survive in places like this, a treeless island covered by a thick cap of snow and ice except for a brief, but glorious, summer. It also makes them willing to try, and then cover, strange conveniences like barbecued corn chips, spaghetti in a can and frozen fried chicken.

Just a generation ago, the Inuit diet was entirely traditional. But by 1988, a study showed, only a third of the diet was composed of seal and caribou. The rest was bought in stores.

"Only nonperishable items that can travel for long distances are readily available," said Olivier Receveur, a professor of dietetics and human nutrition at the Center for Indigenous Peoples Nutrition and Environment at McGill University in Montreal. "A gallon of milk will cost more than $5, so most people will use powdered milk or juice crystals instead of the real thing."

Mr. Receveur is working on one of the most extensive surveys ever done of dietary habits in the eastern Canadian Arctic. He is looking at the amount of pollutants the Inuit take in because of the contaminated traditional foods they eat. For instance, a bite-sized morsel of raw whale skin, called muktuk, an Inuit delicacy, has been found to contain more PCBs than Canadian scientists recommend be taken in a week.

Receveur is trying to measure the degree to which southern cuisine has distorted diets that had remained unchanged for thousands of years.

"Our working analysis is that the benefits of traditional foods will outweigh any risks and should be maintained as the primary diet of the Inuit people," he said. "But we may find out that the concentration of contaminants in the food is so high that it poses too great a danger to the populace."

People older than 50 can remember when almost every day in the north was walrus and blubber day. With few implements available in which to cook, and even fewer spices, recipes tended to be rudimentary.

"All they know is how to boil the food," said Shawn Wilton, who cooks at the restaurant in a lodge in Igloolik run by the Inuit cooperative.

Mr. Wilton, a native of Steady Brook, Newfoundland, is married to an Inuit woman, Tapeasa, and has lived in the north for more than a decade. "Hamburgers and chicken, that's what people here want to eat," he said.

He has observed that although many residents of Igloolik do not have much money, they eat at his restaurant because they do not really know how to cook southern food. Once, he said, he knew neighbors who had gone out to buy T-bone steaks, which can cost $14 each in the supermarket.

"My wife went to see them and when she came back she said, 'You'll never believe what they've done with the T-bone,'" he said. "They boiled it."

JORDAN: King Is Clinically Dead; Family Deciding on Last Step

Continued from Page 1

the situation is critical but we hope it gets better."

Both the Israeli and the Palestinian delegations at the United Nations opened an otherwise contentious meeting on Israeli settlements by expressing support for King Hussein.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt — like the king, an Arab leader who has nudged others in the region toward peace with Israel — expressed his concern about the king's health.

Meeting with Sultan Qaboos ibn Said of Oman, Mr. Mubarak issued a statement in both leaders' names, saying they received the news of the king's decision to return home "with great concern and wished that Jordan would remain stable."

Many Palestinians in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, most of whom hold Jordanian citizenship, were also anxious about the king's fate.

"We fear for the king, as he has supported Palestinian rights and the peace process," said Hasan Ahmed, a Jerusalem clerk.

Palestinians mainly keep their accounts in Jordanian banks and watched the dip of the dinar with concern.

Others retained memories of the king's bloody quashing of a 1970 Palestinian uprising in Jordan.

"God punished the king, as he killed Palestinians in 1970," said Salah Abu Zeineh, a Nablus upholsterer. "All his fortune could not help him get treatment."

King Hussein had been a moderating force in the region in recent years, helping to broker the difficult Israeli-Palestinian talks at critical junctures.

Israel has closer relations with Jordan than any neighboring country, and the kingdom's stability is seen there as a bulwark against a collapse of the peace process.

Among Arabs, the worry was what a shift in Jordan could mean for the region as a whole.

Questions over Jordan's stability were prompted last month by a sudden change of succession. Some in the region have questioned the experience of Prince Abdullah, 37, a senior army officer who has kept a low profile.

The king is the longest-surviving ruler of an Arab nation and has played a pivotal role as a middle man between his larger neighbor Iraq and other Arab nations.

Iraq has suffered pariah status since invading Kuwait in 1990, and being driven out in the 1991 Gulf War. Jordan became one of its few conduits for aid and trade.

Jordanians sobbing during Friday prayers in Amman after the king returned home from unsuccessful cancer treatment in the United States.

King Hussein on Jan. 19 in Amman as he returned from the United States after six months of therapy for lymphoma. A few days later, the king returned to America for a bone marrow transplant, which failed.

BMW: Chief Executive and Heir Apparent Are Out in Rare Sweep Linked to Difficulties at Rover Subsidiary be a turnaround at the unprofitable Rover operations.

Continued from Page 1

Rover's fate threatened Friday to become a heated political issue in Britain, where autoworkers are concerned that Munich-based BMW might consider shutting down Rover's flagship production plant in Longbridge, near Birmingham.

British government officials joined trade union officials in demanding that BMW honor a commitment made in December that it would keep the plant open.

Autoworkers said they feared that new management could bring an eventual shutdown of Longbridge, the largest of Rover's three factories and the oldest auto plant in Britain.

BMW threatened late last year to close Longbridge, which employs 14,000 workers and indirectly supports tens of thousands of parts suppliers, but it backed off after the autoworkers agreed to the elimination of 2,500 jobs at Rover this year. BMW cut 2,350 jobs in the Rover group last year.

Rover's 1998 losses are estimated to have been as high as 1.5 billion Deutsche marks ($869.3 million), greater than last year's entire BMW group net profit. The German parent has not yet released profit figures for last year.

Analysts said the supervisory board had lost patience with Mr. Pischetsrieder because Rover's poor performance had overshadowed a record year at BMW's German operations. BMW sold a record 699,378 cars last year but its profit dropped for the first time since 1993 because of Rover.

Longbridge assembles most of the line of Rover passenger cars, which plunged in sales last year by 17 percent to 303,800. By contrast, Rover's popular line of Land Rover sport-utility vehicles — which are built at the Solihull plant near Oxford — had a 20 percent jump in 1998 demand to 153,500.

BMW evidently was surprised by the magnitude of Rover's problems. The company was slow to recognize Rover's 30 percent productivity gap with BMW's Bavarian plants.

Mr. Pischetsrieder led the 1994 acquisition of Rover as one of his first assignments as chief executive. His mistake, analysts say, was to manage Rover at arm's length.

An Anglophile who speaks fluent English, Mr. Pischetsrieder was worried about anti-German feelings, and he maintained Rover as a separate company.

KOSOVO: Serbs Bar 2 Rebel Delegates at Airport

Continued from Page 1

International monitors were trying to persuade the Serbs to let all the delegates go, but said the chances of arranging a flight appeared slight as darkness fell.

"It looks as if it is off for tonight," said Rexhep Qosja, one of the delegates. "It is up to the Kosovo Verification Mission to sort this out."

A senior official of the OSCE, which runs the cease-fire monitoring mission in Kosovo, said the overseeing six-nation Contact Group was preparing to issue a strong demand to Belgrade.

"It's an all-or-none deal," the official said. "We're doing all we can. The Serbs will be held accountable if the Rambouillet talks do not go forward."

Veton Surroi, an independent member of the ethnic Albanian delegation, said the rest of the team would not leave without four Kosovo Liberation Army representatives.

The non-KLA delegates returned to the provincial capital, Pristina, after the standoff developed at the airport.

"The Yugoslav government is preventing the KLA representatives from joining the Kosovo Albanian delegation," Mr. Surroi said. "We are not going to leave Pristina if we are not complete."

Making public the composition of the Serbian negotiating team in Belgrade, the state-run Tanjug press agency reported Friday that top aides to President Slobodan Milosevic would attend the talks, along with representatives from mostly tiny ethnic communities in Kosovo.

In another sign of continuing tensions, international verifiers were trying Friday to settle a standoff in the town of Srbica, 30 kilometers (18 miles) west of Pristina, where Serbian policemen were trying to enter rebel territory to investigate a robbery at a Serbian Orthodox monastery.

About eight armored vehicles were prepared to move to the monastery of Devic, where thieves made off with farm equipment three days ago.

Rebels of the Kosovo Liberation Army refused to let the monitors enter the ethnic Albanian area.

(AP, AFP, Reuters)

The French ambassador to Macedonia, Jacques Huntzinger, gesturing in frustration Friday at the Pristina airport when Serbs blocked members of the Kosovo delegation trying to leave for talks.

North Korean Defectors Find Not Much to Cheer in the South

By Don Kirk
International Herald Tribune

SEOUL — The messages on the leaflets wafting down over North Korean towns and villages from balloons launched from South Korea seemed clear enough: "Come see your brothers and sisters in the South," said a typical leaflet picked up by North Koreans who subsequently fled to South Korea. "Live in peace and freedom. We promise you money and job opportunities."

The reality, as recounted by North Koreans who have defected to South Korea in recent years, is quite different. "We have no money, no jobs," said Han Chang Kwon, president of an association of North Koreans protesting the treatment they say they have received here. "We demand the government stop this propaganda. It is totally misleading."

The disillusionment begins within minutes after a typical defector arrives in Seoul after having traveled, sometimes for years, by a circuitous route through China or Russia.

"When we arrive at the airport, we are given flowers and have a photo session for television and the newspapers," said Mr. Han, who came here four and a half years ago. "Then we are taken by van to an interrogation center. They strip off our clothes. They insult us with crude remarks. They pour questions on you as confused, dumbfounded. They beat you like a dog with sticks."

Such charges have infuriated the powerful National Intelligence Service, the new name for the National Security Planning Agency, formerly the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. It is responsible for interrogating defectors to see if any of them are really spies sent down from the North.

The defectors "claimed that they were tortured by government agencies," said the National Intelligence Service, "in a desperate attempt" to extract more "settlement money" promised by the government to all those who manage to get here from North Korea.

Interviews with defectors, however, indicate that many of them were indeed mistreated by interrogators and are unhappy with their lives in the South even though they now live more comfortably than they ever did in the North.

While the beatings may have largely stopped since the inauguration of President Kim Dae Jung nearly a year ago, those who have studied the problems of defectors point to a larger problem.

How, they ask, can South Korea absorb thousands of North Koreans who may want to come to the South in the next few years when the government still has not found a way to deal with the 751 North Koreans who have defected to the South since the Korean War in the early 1950s?

"The problem lies in both lack of policy and lack of determination of defectors to adjust to our society," said Oh

Hye Jung, a Roman Catholic nun who works for a church committee on unification. "The government's support program is inadequate. This problem should be seen from a long-term view. The government just gives them a small amount of settlement money and that's all. That way, the problem cannot be solved."

Typically, defectors say they have to spend most of their settlement money to buy the small apartments in which they live. Thrown into the hard-driving capitalist society of the South, they say, they survive day-by-day through menial, temporary jobs.

"I am deeply disappointed by life here," said Hong Jin Hee, who bribed North Korean border guards to cross the Yalu River into China in 1993. "I would never have come here if I had any idea what life is like here."

Researchers at the Unification Institute, a government think tank, said they were working on contingency plans for the possibility of a flood of refugees pouring south if North Korea collapses.

"But we are not quite serious about such planning," said Choi Jin Wook, a research fellow at the institute. "We do not want immediate unification. We prefer coexistence with the North."

He justified tough interrogations as the only way to find out the real backgrounds of some of the defectors.

"Many of them might have been involved in crimes in North Korea," he said. "They do not want to report exactly what was their position in the North. They inflate their rank in the workplace. They say they were managers when they were just workers."

Such arguments only add to the fury of Mr. Han as he contemplates his next move, suing the government for damages.

TESTIMONY: Lewinsky's Fencing

Continued from Page 1

presence of two managers, a phalanx of White House lawyers, a group of senators and her attorneys. "I probably blushed or giggled or something," she said when asked how she had responded to Mr. Jordan.

Prosecutors consider this exchange, along with numerous others, as evidence that Mr. Clinton was trying to obstruct justice: using his friends to maintain the silence and loyalty of a witness who, if she chose, could deliver damaging testimony against him in the Paula Corbin Jones sexual harassment lawsuit.

Under repeated prodding by Mr. Bryant, Ms. Lewinsky made clear that she did not have to be enticed to conceal their illicit relationship from the lawyers in the Jones case or others, because she understood the ground rules of it.

She also acknowledged that her regard for Clinton has not completely soured.

"Do you still have feelings for the president?" Mr. Bryant asked.

"I have mixed feelings," she replied.

Pressed about those emotions, she turned Mr. Bryant away with this posture: "I think what you need to know is that my grand jury testimony is truthful irrespective of whatever those mixed feelings are in my testimony today."

But Mr. Bryant did not quit. "Do you still, uh, respect the president, still admire the president?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, with no further explanation.

"Do you still appreciate what he is doing for this country as the president?"

"Yes."

Later, Mr. Bryant came back to that question — a point that has intrigued much of the country, many people having asked whether the former White House intern feels betrayed by Mr. Clinton, who once told the world in a televised appearance: "I did not have sexual relations with that woman, Ms. Lewinsky."

"I assume you think he's a very intelligent man?" Mr. Bryant asked.

Ms. Lewinsky answered, "I think he's an intelligent president."

The crowded presidential suite at the luxury hotel erupted into laughter.

In a separate bit of sparring that touched a nerve, Ms. Lewinsky took issue with Mr. Bryant's characterization of her sexual affair with the president. He referred her to what he called their "first so-called salacious occasion."

"Can — can we — can you call it something else?" she responded. "I mean, this is my relationship."

"What would you like to call it?" he asked.

She struggled for a moment, then said: "It was my first encounter with the president, so I don't really see it as my first salacious — that's not what this was."

Again, Mr. Bryant persisted, pointing out that salacious has "kind of been the word that's been picked up all around."

She agreed, but then came up with "encounter, maybe?" — a compromise they settled on.

Mr. Bryant focused on the episode because it is part of the prosecutors' perjury case against Mr. Clinton. The managers contend that the pair's groping on that occasion in a White House office clearly fit the definition of sexual relations that Mr. Clinton was asked about later in the Jones lawsuit. In his grand jury testimony last year, the president insisted that he told the truth when he denied such relations in his Jones case deposition.

But while Ms. Lewinsky confirmed that her account contradicts Mr. Clinton's, she refused to say the president was lying. "I really don't feel comfortable characterizing whether what he said was truthful or not truthful," she said. "I know I've testified to what I believe is true."

On the issue of the gifts, she insisted that the president's secretary, Betty Currie, and not Mr. Clinton, had wanted her to return a number of gifts he had given her about the time their affair was becoming known publicly. That is another key point in the obstruction-of-justice case against Mr. Clinton.

Ms. Lewinsky also did not take the bait in questioning by Mr. Bryant on whether she was upset by Mr. Clinton's comments after their affair became known. In the days after the scandal spread publicly, Mr. Clinton told several White House aides that Ms. Lewinsky was a "stalker" who threatened him if he did not have sex with her.

But Ms. Lewinsky seemed unnerved by this line of questioning. "Did you come on to the president and make a sexual demand on the president?" Mr. Bryant asked.

Ms. Lewinsky answered, "No."

Chinese Encoun

Mandela, Laudi ges Elections

Says Indonesia
East Timor C

Also has later, quest

02/06/1999

Chinese Encourage Teaching of Atheism to Counter Dalai Lama

By Seth Faison
New York Times Service

SHANGHAI — The Chinese authorities in Tibet like to say they tolerate religious freedom, though many Tibetans complain that their religious activities are tightly controlled and permitted only on Chinese terms.

In practice, people are allowed to worship at temples at certain times, but the authorities closely monitor any activity — in monasteries, universities or elsewhere — that hints at anything they consider a threat to Chinese control over Tibet.

Now, as officials take a tough line aimed at discouraging any unrest as a series of sensitive anniversaries approach in the coming months, the government is encouraging the teaching of atheism, which appears to run counter to the promises of religious tolerance.

At a gathering of senior officials in Tibet last month, the authorities announced that they would expand the teaching of atheism among Communist Party members and government employees and also in Tibetan society in general.

An official report on the meeting, carried in government-controlled media in other parts of China in recent days, described an endorsement of the teaching of atheism, saying it should be expanded.

"Improving the publicizing of atheism is an important responsibility of the propaganda and ideological front by the Communist Party," the report said. "It is also an important measure in the waging of an in-depth struggle against separatism, resisting the reactionary infiltration of the Dalai Lama clique, and guiding Tibetan farmers and herdsmen in ridding themselves of passive religious influence."

The report said there was a growing need to "improve the moral and ideological quality of all Tibetan people," which in Communist Party language means accepting party principles of atheism and obedience.

This latest step appears to be an extension of a "patriotic education campaign," as the authorities call their recent efforts to stamp out allegiance to the Dalai Lama, Tibet's spiritual leader, who has lived in exile since 1959.

"In the past, atheism has been encouraged among Communist Party cadres in Tibet," said Kate Saunders of the Tibet Information Network, a London-based organization. "Now they are extending it to wider society, especially in the schools."

Chinese officials are concerned about two sensitive anniversaries, Ms. Saunders said. They are the 40th anniversary of an uprising on March 10, 1959, when the Dalai Lama fled, and the 10th anniversary, on March 8, of riots in the Tibetan capital, Lhasa, that led to the imposition of martial law.

In the rest of China, the authorities have begun a widespread crackdown on dissidents, writers and the media in recent months, apparently determined to prevent any protests during other sensitive anniversaries — namely, the 10th anniversary of the Tiananmen crackdown in June 1989, and the 50th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China on Oct. 1, 1949.

In Tibet, officials are focused on blocking any show of sympathy or allegiance to the Dalai Lama. But their current campaign is being publicly presented in a broader context of the official aim to modernize Tibet, still a poor and largely rural area populated mostly by farmers and herdsmen.

"Publicizing atheism should start with every aspect of daily life for the masses," the official report said.

Despite the official policy of permitting religious worship, many Chinese officials see the intense devotion to Buddhism among Tibetans as primitive and ignorant.

BRIEFLY

Rightist Leaders Split in Australia

SYDNEY — Australia's far-right One Nation party was in turmoil Friday as 2 of its 10 elected state Parliament members resigned and the other 8 threatened to quit unless the party leader, Pauline Hanson, and two other senior figures stepped down.

There has been a rising tide of resentment about the power held by Mrs. Hanson and the two associates. It came to a head when a draft document was put before the party that enshrines the right of the three to rule unelected and unchallenged for at least the next two years.

One Nation's 10 legislators in Queensland state have demanded that the three resign and seek reelection at the party's annual meeting on Feb. 18. (AP)

China Shuts Down An Internet Site

BEIJING — Less than five days after Chinese authorities singled it out for criticism, a popular Internet bulletin board has been shut down, a human rights group reported Friday.

The bulletin board service, "Everything Under the Sun," was on a Web page run by a Chinese computer software company. It drew 60,000 messages in December and January, the Hong Kong-based Information Center of Human Rights and Democratic Movement in China said.

Message writers had become increasingly bold, even discussing the 10th anniversary on June 4 of the military's violent quelling of the Tiananmen Square democracy movement, the group said. (AP)

Mahathir Deputy Given Wider Duties

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysia's prime minister, Mahathir bin Mohamad, Friday gave his deputy and possible successor a wider role in his ruling party as it prepared for elections.

Deputy Prime Minister Abdullah Ahmad Badawi said he would perform the duties of deputy president of the United Malays National Organization but that he would not formally fill the post. Mr. Mahathir, 73, is party president. Mr. Mahathir named Mr. Abdullah, 53, as deputy prime minister Jan. 8. (Reuters)

Pakistan Supports Kashmir Militants

ISLAMABAD — Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on Friday went to a disputed Himalayan border Pakistan shares with arch-rival India to reaffirm Pakistani support for militants fighting Indian rule over two-thirds of the region of Kashmir. Pakistan controls the remaining third.

"We do not have a mere geographical link with Kashmir, rather we have a relation of blood and ideology and, above all, we are tied in the bonds of humanity," the official news agency quoted him as saying in a speech near the border.

Since independence from Britain in 1947, the two sides have fought two wars over Kashmir. (Reuters)

Mandela, Lauding Party, Urges Elections for May

The Associated Press

CAPE TOWN — In his last major address to Parliament, President Nelson Mandela said Friday that the "long walk" for a better life was not over, and revealed his preferred time for the country's second all-race elections: between May 18 and 27.

The long-awaited word on election timing was the most specific statement yet from the man who sets the date. Parliament still must work out constitutional details before he can formally fix the day.

"I am, however, able to give the indication, after extensive consultations, that we aim to select a day for our second national election in the period between the 18th and 27th of May," read the text of his speech.

Mr. Mandela did not pronounce the words. The government said he had committed them at the last minute because of a legal challenge from opposition parties to registration rules. But "the approach remains as contained in the text," the government said.

The first national balloting since the fall of apartheid in 1994's all-race vote had been expected by May, the beginning of a 90-day window set by the constitution for elections.

Officials want the vote to take place before the Southern Hemisphere winter sets in to ensure a higher turnout. South Africa's political parties have been pressing for a date to be set so the campaign can begin in earnest.

Mr. Mandela plans to retire after the elections, and the next parliamentary session will almost certainly be opened by Deputy President Thabo Mbeki, Mr. Mandela's heir apparent and favorite to win the vote.

The ceremony Friday provided South Africans with a chance to look back on the "Mandela era," which transformed the country from a racist, pariah state to a major regional diplomatic power.

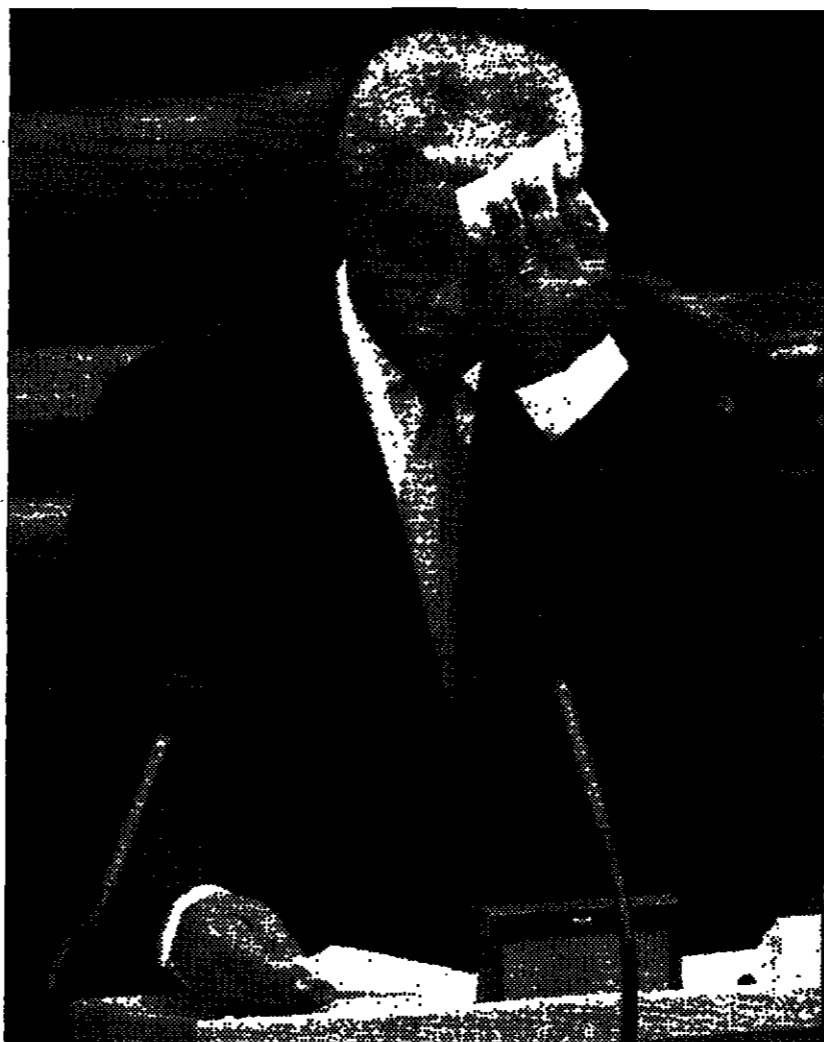

In his speech, Mr. Mandela lauded the achievements of his African National Congress party in bringing basic services to millions of poor blacks who had been ignored under apartheid.

In five years, he said, the government brought clean water to 3 million people and connected more than 2 million people to the electricity grid. But he noted that the work of creating a better standard of living for all South Africans had not been completed.

"There is not time to pause," he said. "The long walk is not yet over. The prize of a better life has yet to be won."

Mr. Mandela acknowledged that much of the euphoria that greeted the 1994 vote had faded amid continuing racial divisions and high rates of violent crime. He warned that racial tension was destroying the country and souring its image abroad, adding: "This must come to an end. For, indeed, those who thrive on hatred destroy their own capacity to make a positive contribution."

On crime, Mr. Mandela said: "Let me reiterate. The battle against crime has been joined and we have no doubts at all who the victors will be."

President Nelson Mandela making his last State of the Nation speech to Parliament on Friday in Cape Town. He intends to retire after the elections.

U.S. Says Indonesia Military Backs East Timor Cease-Fire

Reuters

JAKARTA — Indonesia's armed forces support East Timorese rebel calls for a cease-fire in the territory as well as the disarming of rival militias to stem a rising tide of violence, a senior American official said Friday.

The official, Stanley Roth, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asia and Pacific affairs, said the Indonesian defense minister, General Wiranto, had endorsed the call by Xanana Gusmao, a rebel leader serving a 20-year sentence for armed rebellion, to counter escalating violence in East Timor.

After meeting General Wiranto, who also is the chief of the armed forces, Mr. Roth said, "He told me that he liked Xanana Gusmao's idea that all parties should have their weapons taken away and that there should be a cease-fire and an end to the violence."

Mr. Gusmao made his plea last week after Indonesia suddenly reversed its opposition to independence for the former Portuguese territory.

Jakarta said it would consider letting East Timor go, after 23 years of rule, if East Timorese rejected an offer of special autonomy granting them wide powers over their affairs.

Mr. Roth said he had expressed Washington's concern over mounting violence in East Timor during talks with senior officials, including General Wiranto and President B. J. Habibie.

Indonesia's official National Human Rights Commission says at least 50 people have died during clashes between pro- and anti-Jakarta groups in the territory over the past six months.

The commission, pro-independence groups and aid workers accuse the military of giving 20,000 guns to loyalist militias.

General Wiranto denies arming civilians, but has said that paramilitary units have been given guns to help the armed forces, the ABRI. There are virtually no pro-independence Timorese in such units.

Mr. Roth said violence in the territory could jeopardize diplomatic talks over its future, which he said were the most promising in the 19 years he has been watching East Timor.

"This is the first time in that 19-year period that I am optimistic that there is the basis for a political settlement," he said.

Portugal's envoy to Indonesia, Ana Gomes, on Friday met Mr. Gusmao in a Jakarta prison to discuss the territory's future if it became independent.

After the meeting, Mr. Gusmao said the two discussed how to avoid a civil war there, how to avoid violence in East Timor and how Portugal can help.

Indonesia invaded East Timor in 1975 and annexed it the following year in a move that has not been recognized by the United Nations.

Xanana Gusmao, the jailed East Timorese leader, hugging Ana Gomes, a Portuguese diplomat, after the two met Friday in a prison in Jakarta. The two discussed problems of stability in the former Portuguese colony.

TIMOR: Idea of Local Rule in a Federal Indonesia Is Gaining Support existing secular state.

Continued from Page 1

With more than 300 ethnic groups and many different religions spread across more than 17,000 islands, some neighboring countries fear that Indonesia may be confronting a risk of disintegration, a variation of "balkanization."

In an interview on Friday, the Indonesian foreign minister, Ali Alatas, sought to calm such unease. He emphasized that Jakarta's strongly preferred option for East Timor was for wide-ranging autonomy, not independence.

He said that even if the East Timorese rejected autonomy, he did not think that the offer of independence would set off a chain reaction in other parts of Indonesia.

"The situation of East Timor is entirely different, historically, politically, and also on the ground, from Aceh or Irian Jaya and so on," he said.

Indonesia invaded East Timor, then a Portuguese colony, in 1975 and annexed it the following year, a move that was not recognized by most countries or the United Nations. The other parts of Indonesia were inherited from the Dutch East Indies colonial empire.

An Iranian couple mourning Friday at the grave of their son, who was killed in the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war, during ceremonies in Tehran to mark the Islamic revolution's 20th anniversary.

They don't care, so how can they think of solving it? They don't even know what's going on."

Mohammed, 39, a carpet weaver in northwest Iran, said, "We haven't had a good meal in 20 years."

I don't care about the revolution," he said. "The problem is we can't live."

Many spoke with a boldness that is new to Iran in expressing not only resentment toward the clerics, widely described as aloof and indifferent, but sometimes even vague nostalgia for the days of the shah.

Residents who defied the revolution said they believed its critics were holding it to the wrong standard. "I think the most important change was independence, not being a colony," said Nasser Sarkhan, 29, a member of Iran's volunteer paramilitary force.

IRAN: 20 Years Later, Questions About the Revolution

Continued from Page 1

Much Iranian discontent was channeled into the election of Mohammed Khatami, the president who won a landslide victory two years ago as a candidate supported by the ruling clerical establishment. Mr. Khatami, who has pressed for greater social and political openness, is seen by some Iranians as someone who might lead the country into what might be truly called a post-revolutionary era.

But Mr. Khatami remains part of the clerical establishment, as signified by his black clerical turban, without which he almost certainly would not have been elected. And even he has expressed concern that Iranians might be tempted to turn away from the past and to discard cornerstones just 20 years old.

"Poisonous winds are blowing inside and outside the country," Mr. Khatami warned in an anniversary address the other day. "Enemies are attempting to separate you from the Islamic revolution and the system."

The president did not elaborate. But in recent months, Iran has appeared increasingly troubled as the murders of dissident writers were revealed to have been carried out by rogue intelligence agents, prompting public protests that in turn met with violence from unpoliced thugs.

Even though two decades have passed, it is images of the revolution that still dominate Tehran, where the picture of Ayatollah Khomeini, who died in 1989, glowers down from countless buildings and office walls.

And the very structure of the government, headed by a supreme religious leader, now Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, who is regarded as God's representative on earth, is a product of the revolution that created the world's first Islamic theocracy.

Still, Iranian officials readily concede that young Iranians in particular appear to have little idea of what the revolution was about and that keeping memories alive is much of what the anniversary celebration is about.

The shah's regime finally fell on Feb. 11, 1979, after days of street battles, and the celebration is to reach its peak that day in a mass rally and military parade. In the meantime, film, music and theater festivals are under way, as is an exhibition showcasing the country's achievements since 1979, under banners like one that read: "The 10 days of dawn gave our nation the sweet fruit of victory."

To questions about why the revolution took place, Ayatollah Khamenei and others have pointed to corruption under the shah and to what they have suggested was Iran's old place as an outpost of the United States.

Yet no mention is being made of the darker side of a revolution that others remember with horror. More than 10,000 people, including some of Ayatollah Khomeini's own aides, were executed in a wave of terror that followed his return.

Nor has mention been made of the economy's downward turn in the years that followed the revolution, in a country where high oil prices and a much smaller population created prosperity under the shah.

For years, Iranians seemed willing to forgive hardships, on the grounds that the revolution was not about economics. But in the conversations around Iran this year, the state of the economy was a constant theme of the many people who said that on the anniversary of the revolution, they saw little to celebrate.

"It's not only me," said Ali, a 37-year-old cleaner, who was interviewed as he swept the stairs of an apartment complex on a chilly night in Tehran. "Everybody gets angry. These clerics don't know what kind of problems we have."

Spaghetti

People older than 50 can remember the spaghetti day in the north was when the spaghetti was served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

It is now how to boil the spaghetti. The spaghetti is served in a bowl, not a plate. With few exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl, and even fewer exceptions, spaghetti was served in a bowl.

ART

Picasso's Politics: An Artistic Theme

Show Examines His Life in Occupied Paris

By Michael Kimmelman
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — By now, nothing about Picasso's life or work is still unexamined. Fortunately, Picasso has been an elastic subject, an artist of quixotic style and mesmeric narcissism, suited to the modern industry of reinterpretation, which, in turn, has supported the equally fertile and even more profitable business of the blockbuster show.

Picasso remains the prime example of modern art's folie à deux with mass taste and its peculiar version of the cult of the genius, which during this era has become virtually synonymous with fame. It is fame, and sheer admiration, that fuel the public's seemingly unquenchable desire for more Picasso exhibitions.

Inevitably, the latest Picasso exhibition, "Picasso and the War Years: 1937-1945," organized by the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco and Opening Friday at the Guggenheim Museum in New York, does not come as a revelation, notwithstanding its hopeful claim to examine an "understudied period" of Picasso's career. The landmark work of the period is maybe the most famous painting of the century, "Guernica," so how un-understudied can this period be?

"Guernica" is not in the show, but a good number of studies for it and other pictures related to it, including several of the familiar "Weeping Women," are here.

Much of the art on view at the Guggenheim is therefore familiar. But the exhibition and its accompanying catalogue are nonetheless not to be dismissed, because at their core is a subject that, like all complex issues of private morality, cannot be exhausted and will probably never be resolved. That subject is the character of Picasso's life and politics in occupied Paris.

This issue of moral relativism was faced by nearly everyone who survived the Nazi period in Europe. Picasso, in a sense, was merely a conspicuous case.

He had not been politically engaged until the Spanish Civil War in the mid-1930s caused him, among other things, to make the "Dream and Lie of Franco," an etching that he sold to support the Republican government. "Guernica," his response to the Nazi bombing of a Basque town that he had never seen, was painted for the Spanish Republican pavilion at the 1937 World's Fair in Paris.

It is useful, nevertheless, to remember that when Picasso was first commissioned to do the work for the pavilion, he chose a nonpolitical theme — an artist and model — only transforming it at a late date into the subject of the bombing. The final result disappointed some Republicans and their allies anyway. They thought it should have been even more explicit.

When World War II began, Picasso chose to stick it out in his studio on the Rue des Grands-Augustins. He was not allowed to exhibit, but he managed to have paintings sold, some of which were bought by Germans, and he lived far more comfortably than most people did. Hitler had declared him to be a "degenerate" artist, and according to one document, the German authorities ordered Picasso to report for a physical examination, a prelude to deportation to a labor camp. He evaded this order, perhaps through the intervention of Arno Breker, Hitler's favorite sculptor.

Questions have been raised ever since. Why did he stay when he had the chance to emigrate? Was he secretly helping the Resistance? Conversely, did he get special treatment from the Germans? Whom did his presence in Paris benefit more, the occupiers (in terms of the economy) or the occupied (in terms of morale)? After the war he declared himself a communist. Stalin hated modern art as much as Hitler did, but the communists had been enemies of the fascists, and many of Picasso's friends in Paris were members of the French Communist Party.

What was the true nature of his political conviction? At the heart of all these questions is the most obvious one: how much can any of this — his Spanish Republicanism, his sentiments about the occupation, his communist conversion — be detected in his art? This is the real subject of the present exhibition. It is a handsome, tedious display of roughly 80 paintings, drawings, prints and sculptures from among the hundreds of works Picasso turned out during the war. We may tend to imagine the art of these years in black, white and gray, the "Guernica" palette, but many of the works are orange, yellow, red, purple and blue. Picasso was a more vivid and original colorist than people think.

His point was applied in fast, free, sometimes whimsical dashes and scrawls. A good example, "Woman in a Gray Hat Seated in an Armchair," with its scribbled line, pink flesh, scarlet lips and goggle-eyed, split-view face, looks like the prime source for de Kooning's blowy "Women": jaunty, cartoonish and fresh. The overall effect is of an immediacy and a total, almost arrogant linear command.

A new kind of distortion affects many of his wartime figures, their abstracted faces twisted like slabs of hard, flat rubber into knots or made to look like blocks of jagged crystal. The expressions tend to be wide-eyed and impassive. These are mute monsters, occupying confined, hermetic spaces. Figure and room are often knitted together by an obsessive tangle of spiky lines.

A few motifs — skulls, candles, pinches, food — dominate the many still lifes he painted. Food was scarce, of course, and so was heat. One of the better pictures is a view from the inside of his studio through a window. In the foreground is a big radiator. The colors are brown and ice-blue and the impression is of a solid mass, a kind of frozen sculptural form, not an open, airy space.

The organizers of the show, echoing what writers have noticed before, see these pictures as having been strongly affected by the occupation. The still lifes, for instance, are memento mori, the figure studies reflect his own solitude.

To a degree this is simply undeniable. After the liberation in 1944, Picasso told an American journalist that he had not explicitly painted the war "because I am not the kind of painter who goes out like a photographer for something to depict."

"But," he went on, "I have no doubt that the war is in these paintings I have done. Later on perhaps the historians will find them and show that my style has changed under the war's influence."

And of course that is exactly what has happened. Everyone has detected the war, at least implicitly, in many of these pictures.

BUT IT IS NOT in some of them, too. With Picasso, the tendency has been to interpret his works as if each object had a specific symbolic meaning to be decoded. We have been told that the "Weeping Women" are portraits of Dora Maar and victims of the Spanish Civil War and Medusa and Mary Magdalene.

The organizers of this exhibition — principally Steven Nash of the San Francisco museums, with Robert Rosenblum at the Guggenheim — to their credit, have wisely left themselves interpretive wiggle room. The interesting catalogue is written by art historians of sometimes contradictory views, which seems a prudent approach because with Picasso the key word remains ambiguity.

The best wartime paintings are good precisely because they are not specifically about anything. "Guernica" may be famous and virtuous, but it is a hodgepodge of Cubist design enlarged to the scale of a billboard and uneasily hitched to a program of political dissent. Picasso probably was not very comfortable grafting a political agenda onto his art because in the end his art was, like everything else in his life, about him.

He survived the war, as did countless people, imperfectly but with dignity. About his decision to remain in Paris rather than emigrate, as many other artists did when the Nazis invaded, he told his companion Françoise Gilot in 1943: "I'm not looking for risks to take, but in a sort of passive way I don't care to yield to either force or terror. I want to stay because I'm here. The only kind of force that could make me leave would be the desire to leave. Staying on isn't really a manifestation of courage; it's just a form of inertia."

As one of the writers, Brigitte Baer, asks in the catalogue: "Why should he be a hero? An artist is an artist; it is not the same profession."

Pablo Picasso posing in his Paris studio in 1933.

From the Ridiculous to the Sublime

By Souren Melikian
International Herald Tribune

NEW YORK — Will Jan. 29 be remembered as the historic day on which world-record prices were paid at Christie's for French, Italian and Spanish paintings in a market where supplies keep shrinking? Or was it the effect of the continuing American boom?

The answer is yes to both questions, with the emphasis on the former. It is becoming increasingly evident that in 20 or 30 years little will be left of any substance and awareness of that prospect is spreading fast, transforming the whole market into an entirely new ball game.

That money was flowing easily was clear from the beginning on Jan. 29. Christopher Burge's unsurpassed skill as an auctioneer at coaxing the extra pound of flesh from the hesitant bidder cannot wholly account for the faultless disposal of the seven banal pictures offered as a warm-up exercise to wake up the attendance.

There may have been some topical humor to Jan Van Kessel's panel with a crowing cock and red-faced turkey confronting each other under the stare of parrots, like art buyers bragging about their coup within earshot of greenhorns thirsting for tips. But even that makes the $68,500 promptly paid for the 18.4 by 24.2 centimeter oil on copper seem excessive. And you have to be very rich not to mind coughing up $45,300 for the banal winter landscape done by Thomas Heesters in 1673 best suited for the walls of a dark corridor.

That led up to the first rarity, a circular panel 30.5 centimeters across, by Esaias van de Velde. The imaginary mountainous landscape has charm and it is a discovery. But $497,500, more than double the high estimate, seemed rather generous.

Yet, all this is a joke compared with the extravaganzas triggered by another discovery: the ravishing "Saint Cecilia" painted in 1791 by Gaetano Gandolfi. The Bolognese artist depicted the saint in the guise of a young woman rapturously immersed in the musical piece she plays on the piano as an adolescent equipped with wings to identify him as an angel holds the score for her.

Unlined, its paint surface unmarred by repeated cleaning-cum-varnishing operations, the small 41 centimeter oil painting preserves intact the delicate chiaroscuro achieved by Gandolfi. It is probably the artist's masterpiece. The surprise, the condition and the beauty sent the Saint's image climbing to $728,500, 11 times the highest price anticipated by Christie's. Battle-hardened professionals, including those with a deep love of the art, like Luca Baroni of London, who stood next to me, incredulously laughed.

From a dealer's perspective, such a figure for a painting by a minor master, however enchanting, makes no sense.

It does, however, if you are a millionaire unconcerned about the chances of getting your money back. With supplies drying up, the opportunity of acquiring a newly discovered gem even from a minor master is not to be passed up lightly.

That determination to go after the greatest paintings by masters of lesser reputation or stature had an impact on every school. It boosted the remarkable portrait of a surgeon done in the 1660s by Carlo Maratta, a Roman artist best known for his religious and historical compositions.

At $420,000, the portrait of a surgeon, done in a manner that points to striking affinities with Dutch portraiture, went for almost double Christie's high estimate. It was worth every penny. The penetrating psychological study of the sitter seen flippantly twiddling his scalpel between two fingers and turning his head to give the viewer a searching look, with the thinnest suggestion of a smile on his pressed lips, is not easily forgotten.

This is one of Maratta's greatest portraits and the prospects of getting another Maratta of that caliber are slim. Similar thinking had an even more spectacular impact on a very different artist, Hubert Robert. Known for his imaginary views incorporating architectural elements, Robert's work is in the best of circumstances ornamental with a light-hearted touch.

"Famaisse Egyptienne" is different. With its huge pyramid cut off by the upper edge of the canvas and its two equally enormous obelisks that make the pageant of humans at the base of the pyramid look like beings from the land of Lilliput, it has a visionary quality. The unconventional Robert gracefully flew to a world record $1.1 million.

The last-chance factor? Undoubtedly, and one that particularly affects French 18th-century painting, which is currently making a spectacular comeback. Witness another world-record price, $2.2 million, paid an hour and a half later for Fragonard's "The Fountain of Love."

This is one of the French artist's strangest compositions. A young couple whose nudity is enhanced rather than covered up by their white muslin tunics inspired by Ancient Greek costume rushes forward, avidly seeking to drink the potion of love from a shining bronze bowl held out by a putto. The chiaroscuro, the ill-defined brown clouds floating in the background as light from some invisible sources falls on the couple, point to the admiration felt by the frivolous French painter for the tragically profound Rembrandt.

The appearance in Christie's sale of the forgotten Fragonard — known only through a black and white photograph predating the early 1920s, when it was bought by John N. Willys of Toledo, "Saint Rufina" by Velazquez was once called a Murillo, but buyers went along with the new attribution endorsed by the nabobs of Christie's.

Ohio — caused a sensation. The catalogue describes it as an "autograph replica" of virtually identical dimensions to the original in the Wallace Collection of London. That characterization might have harmed it a decade ago when only primary versions were held to be imbued with any artist's creative impulse.

On Jan. 29, the room considered only the beauty and the rarity, tossed aside conventional prejudice, and turned the "replica" into the artist's record picture.

FASHIONABLE as 18th century painting from France may be once again, it was left to Spain to bring the sale to its shining conclusion.

A very unusual picture by Tomas Hiedes, which could serve as an allegory to art buying, intrigued professionals and collectors alike. A monkey sits in an enclosed garden, perched on a stump amid beautiful potted flowers. Beyond a high fence, a strange milky mist rises. In one corner, an apple tree offers its temptations. There is a lot more to this composition of which the symbolism has yet to be fully elucidated. Crisply painted in strong colors, it shot up to $574,500.

And finally, there came a Velazquez. Until recently, this portrait of a girl looking barely 12, with an expression of sad, tremulous resignation, was called a Murillo. But "Saint Rufina," so identified by the long palm that she holds up, has an austere dignity, an aloofness that rather points to Velazquez. Would buyers go along with the new attribution endorsed by the current authorities on the subject?

A $3 million estimate, unprinted but quoted on request by Christie's, might have discouraged bidders. It seemed to suggest that the auction house halfheartedly subscribed to the latest swing of scholarly opinion — if a Velazquez without any reservations, this was a $7 million to $8 million picture. In today's shrinking market, unwarranted doubts are promptly cast aside.

Sure enough, bidders — four of whom were still battling up to $5 million — eventually ran it up to $8.1 million, $6.9 million with the sale charge. "Saint Rufina" now holds the record for a Velazquez. This makes one wonder how high a Velazquez that is not a former Murillo might rise.

ARTS

Musée Rodin

11th January - 31st March 1999

The Rodin museum reunites in two separate halls the portraits of Madame Feneille.

For 15 years from 1898 to 1913 Rodin engaged himself in translating the image of Marie Feneille at times earthly, intimate and dreamy 15 ancient photographs, 20 sculptures, 4 marble statues.

Hôtel Biron.

77, rue de Varenne - 75007 PARIS

Tel.: 01 44 18 61 10 - Fax: 01 45 51 17 52

Open from Tuesdays to Sundays from 9-30 am to 18-45 pm (last entrance 18-15 pm)

Regular price: 28 F - Special price: 18 F

auCTION sales

IN FRANCE

DROUOT RICHELIEU

9, rue Drouot 75009 Paris - Tel: 33 (0)1 48 00 20 20

PARIS

Wednesday, February 24, 1999

Room 9 at 2 p.m. IMPORTANT WINES AND SPIRITS, on view Tuesday, February 23, from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. ETUDE TAJAN, 37, rue des Mathurins, 75008 Paris. Tel: 33 (0)1 53 30 30 30 - Fax: 33 (0)1 53 30 30 31. Web: <http://www.tajan.com> - Email: tajan@worldnet.fr

Friday, February 26, 1999

Rooms 5 & 6 at 2:15 p.m. 18th and 19th century FURNITURE and WORKS OF ART. ETUDE TAJAN, 37, rue des Mathurins, 75008 Paris. Tel: 33 (0)1 53 30 30 30 - Fax: 33 (0)1 53 30 30 31. Web: <http://www.tajan.com> - Email: tajan@worldnet.fr

Business Opportunities

Appears every Wednesday in The International

To advertise contact:

Souren Melikian at our London office.

Tel: +44 (0)171 580 7752 / Fax: +44 (0)171 580 7462 or your nearest ITT office or representative.

THE WORLD'S DAILY NEWSPAPER

JUHANI PALMU

Landscapes of Finland

Exhibition

Jan. 28 - Feb. 20 1999

BERNHEIM

JEUNE

83, Fbg St-Honoré,

27, Ave. Matignon

Tel +33 (0) 1 42 66 60 31

Regular opening hours

10 h 30 to 12 h 30

14 h 30 to 18 h 30

except Sunday & Monday

For a Free copy of

The International

Herald Tribune

Art Guide

a compilation of galleries, museums, auctioneers...

In Paris write to:

Enzo Lucifera

International Herald Tribune

181 avenue Charles de Gaulle,

92521 Neuilly Cedex, France

In New York write to:

Adele Grossman

International Herald Tribune

850 3rd Avenue

New York 10022

Herald Tribune

THE WORLD'S DAILY NEWSPAPER

art antique

International Fair for Art and Antiques

Düsseldorf

6 - 14 March 1999

daily 11 a.m. - 7 p.m.

Quality is the standard by which experts, enthusiasts and collectors of art and antiques measure art antique.

On show in pleasant surroundings will be only those exhibits which have been especially selected and checked - ranging from antiquity to modern times.

Düsseldorf

Expertise in art

Messe Düsseldorf GmbH

Postfach 10 18 06

D-40081 Düsseldorf

Germany

Tel: +49 (0) 21 51 45 60-01

Fax: +49 (0) 21 51 45 60-60

www.messe-duesseldorf.de m²

Messe

Düsseldorf

GALERIE

HOPKINS • THOMAS • CUSTOT

Impressionist and Modern Paintings

2, rue de Miromesnil, 75008 Paris

Tél. 33 1 42 65 51 05 - Fax 33 1 42 66 90 28

EDITORIALS/OPINION

Herald Tribune

PUBLISHED WITH THE NEW YORK TIMES AND THE WASHINGTON POST

Countdown to Censure

The fact that 25 Republicans joined with Democrats to vote against calling Monica Lewinsky for live testimony means that the Senate is intent on ending President Bill Clinton's impeachment trial. That 70-to-30 vote also suggested that the majority leader, Trent Lott, feels he has stretched things out long enough to placate hard-liners in his party.

Shortly after the vote was taken, Mr. Lott authorized another conservative Republican, Senator Bob Bennett of Utah, to approach pro-censure Democrats about drafting a bipartisan resolution that would attract some Republican co-sponsors. The real action now is taking place in party caucuses and behind-the-scenes negotiations over how to frame a censure resolution that will carry most of the Democrats and at least a handful of Republicans.

The alternative Republican plan to substitute a "finding of fact" for censure has died for lack of support within the Republican caucus.

That plan was offered in good faith by Senator Susan Collins of Maine. Her draft description of Mr. Clinton's false testimony under oath and his attempts to impede justice is supported by the evidence. But her plan to bifurcate the final vote into separate ballots on the evidence and on removal is constitutionally unsound and offended a bipartisan bloc of strict constructionists.

The outcome will be determined by another bipartisan bloc — moderates on both sides of the aisle who want to go down in history as being opposed to Mr. Clinton's irresponsible conduct and as being up-holded by his lies. The jockeying over the language of the censure resolution and the mechanics of introducing it will be intense. Two Democrats, Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Dianne Feinstein, were shopping a draft that condemned Mr. Clinton's actions as "shameless, reckless and indefensible."

The White House would bless that language in a minute, but it is too soft to attract sufficient Republican support. Mr. Bennett and other Republicans willing to sign on to censure rightly insist on language reflecting the reality that Mr. Clinton knowingly did lie under oath and that he did tamper with evidence and witnesses and attempt to impede the lawful progress of a civil rights suit.

These factors dictate a semantic balancing act. Once the language is toughened to conform with the facts of presidential misconduct, a few Democratic loyalists will drop off. But the stiffer censure, if carefully crafted, will pick up a few extra Republicans beyond those needed for a minimal bipartisan majority of 45 Democrats and six Republicans.

Mr. Lott is searching for a parliamentary map as well. Mr. Moynihan has suggested an adjournment in the trial early next week.

During that break the Senate would go into legislative session to pass a censure resolution. With that on the record, the Senate would then go back into trial session and vote down the articles of impeachment.

That scenario may be too complicated, but the Senate is at the point where two powerful political desires are driving its members toward devising some sort of exit plan.

They want the trial to end swiftly without removal of the president. Moreover, most Democrats, looking to their own futures, want to go on record as condemning Mr. Clinton. But they will have no do business with the Republicans, who are right on a key point. Mr. Clinton did not simply misbehave. He committed serious offenses that, while not rising to the level of removable high crimes, must be permanently recorded as base and calculated offenses against the rule of law.

—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Unwelcome Azerbaijani Offer

Seven years ago, a newly independent Azerbaijan emerged from the Soviet Union. Now Azerbaijan is offering to be host to the first American military base on former Soviet territory. Washington should pass up the offer.

Basing American troops in Azerbaijan would needlessly complicate relations with Russia, Armenia and Iran. It would also bring the United States into too close a military relationship with Azerbaijan's autocratic ruler, President Heydar Aliyev.

Washington already has significant security ties with Azerbaijan through NATO's Partnership for Peace and a defense cooperation agreement. But some in Congress are pressing for even closer military cooperation, like the transfer of excess Pentagon equipment. The idea is to build up Azerbaijan and other former Soviet republics as buffers against potential future threats from Russia or Iran. Many energy companies, seeking continued access to oil reserves, also advocate closer ties.

But Washington must be cautious in deepening its military involvement. Azerbaijan and Armenia remain enmeshed in a conflict over the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh, now occupied by Armenia.

Washington should remain neutral and try to mediate a political settlement. Instead Mr. Aliyev is courting an American military presence to offset the military support Russia gives Armenia.

Azerbaijan also fails to meet minimal standards of democracy and human rights. Detainees are tortured, demonstrations suppressed and journalists arrested. Last year's presidential election got failing marks from international observers.

Azerbaijan must improve in these areas and resolve the Nagorno-Karabakh dispute. Closer American security links can wait until it does.

—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Campaign Finance Delays

Dennis Hastert, the new House speaker, has taken a position whose likely effect, if it prevails, will be to kill campaign-finance reform in Congress. The House passed a strong campaign-finance reform bill last year. The vote of 252 to 179 was an extraordinary parliamentary event. A majority that included 61 Republicans had to seize control of the House to record its approval over the opposition of Mr. Hastert's predecessor, Newt Gingrich, and the rest of the Republican leadership.

The bill is ready to be passed again. The drafting was done long ago; the votes are there. But Mr. Hastert indicated that he was inclined to delay it in order to come up with "something that I think is fair," and in the meantime to concentrate instead on Social Security, health care, tax and related issues. No matter that none of those is likely to be ready for floor action for months. Delay always has been the weapon of choice against campaign-finance reform.

The effect this year will be all the greater. It is not just that by delaying the bill Mr. Hastert would make it easier for opponents to use the clock to kill it. Nor is it just that consideration would be kicked over into an election year, when the last thing members of either party want to talk about is a set of rules that might cost them campaign funds. In next year's election, far more will be in play than usual — not just the presidency but, perhaps, control of both houses. Both parties already are raising money in ways that are likely to make the training of the campaign laws in 1996 seem like Little League.

Soft money is the main problem — the use of the parties to raise and spend in behalf of their candidates money that by law the candidates are forbidden to raise and spend themselves. That is the open evasion of the law that last year's House bill would forbid. In 1996, the parties raised three times as much soft money — $250 million — as in the presidential election before. In the recent midterm election, Republican committees raised 112 percent more soft money than in the midterm election before. The Democrats were up 82 percent. It is not an exaggeration to suggest that the government is likely to be bought next year.

If not, it will not be for lack of trying. Quick action on campaign finance could forestall that. One of the things that is thought to have hurt the Republicans in the last election was last year's miserable legislative record, which delay of this bill would perpetuate. The majority forced consideration of campaign finance last year with a discharge petition. Do they have to go through that again?

—THE WASHINGTON POST.

It's Not Too Early for a Final Settlement for Kosovo

By Bob Dole

WASHINGTON — This weekend, Serbian officials and ethnic Albanian leaders are meeting in France as part of a U.S. and European push to end the conflict in Kosovo. It is too early to say that this effort will halt the fighting, let alone lead to genuine peace. But it is not too early to figure out what it will take to reach and implement a fair, democratic and lasting settlement.

First, the United States needs to remember how it got here and who started this mess. No matter how some of America's allies try to muddy the waters, the fact is that the same man who started the war in Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina started this one: Slobodan Milosevic. It was his brutal, decade-long repression of the 2 million Albanians in Kosovo that finally provoked an Albanian insurgency. We have long known that Mr. Milosevic stays in power by fomenting instability. His methods are violent and, as we recently witnessed in the massacre at Racak, his preferred victims are not soldiers but innocent men, women and children.

Second, the United States needs to keep in mind that no matter how much it would like to share the burden of the Balkans with its NATO allies, without U.S. leadership and the application of U.S. principles, there is little likelihood of a just and sustainable settlement. America's European friends have historical prejudices that prevent them from being honest brokers.

For example, the French have had close ties with the Serbs since the end of the last century and, even in the face of Serb-sponsored genocide, have advocated leniency in dealings with Mr. Milosevic.

More important, America must insist on democratic practices and democratic self-government for the Albanian majority in Kosovo. Any agreement must allow for free and fair elections to be held, the provision of civil and political rights to all citizens of Kosovo and the protection of minorities, including the Serbs. The Albanians must be able to exercise genuine self-government and be represented in Yugoslav federal institutions.

Next, as the very recent lesson of Bosnia continues to demonstrate, clarity in agreement language and obligations is essential to the smooth implementation of a settlement. The post-Dayton problem areas in Bosnia have most often been those in which the language of the treaties and annexes has been unclear or where responsibilities have been shared in a vague manner. One way to ensure a better understanding is to allow the Albanians — who unlike the Serbs are inexperienced negotiators and beset by divisions — to be assisted by international experts.

In addition to the duties of the parties, international obligations must also be absolutely clear. In the Dayton annex related to international force deployments, NATO-led forces were empowered, but not required, to arrest war criminals and protect refugees or displaced persons who wanted to return to their homes after the war. As a result, NATO troops have not only failed to arrest the top Serbian war criminals, Ratko Mladic and Radovan Karadzic, but have actively avoided encountering them. At the same time, more than a million Bosnians have been unable to return to their homes, especially in the Bosnian Serb republic.

Negotiating a clear agreement may be more difficult and time-consuming, but vagueness and avoidance of the tough, but most critical issues, guarantee problems down the road.

Another lesson of Bosnia is that it is essential to create a safe environment — safe for American and international forces and safe for civilians. At present, there are more than 20,000 Serbian police, paramilitary and army forces in Kosovo. The current draft, to be presented at the Rambouillet talks, allows 2,500 Serbian police forces to stay in Kosovo. This means a 2,500 percent increase in risk for American and NATO forces. Furthermore, given that the Serbian police were Mr. Milosevic's main tool of violent attacks against Albanian civilians, there is little chance that Albanians who have fled their homes in fear will risk their lives by returning to areas where Serbian police officers are present.

If the United States seeks to minimize its troop commitment, and to avoid obligations to assist in refugee resettlement, it will need to make sure that the environment is as safe as possible. The presence of Serbian forces benefits no one except Mr. Milosevic. A zero-tolerance policy for all Serbian forces and Albanian paramilitary forces is the only way to make Kosovo safe and secure.

Finally, the United States must ensure that any agreement reached in France will have built within it a real exit strategy. If this is truly to be an interim agreement, there must be a date certain for a referendum on Kosovo's final status. Also, the terms of the referendum must be established in advance and the results must be binding. A referendum should include all three options: Maintaining Kosovo as an autonomous province in federal Yugoslavia; giving it third-republic status; and independence. The Serbian and/or Yugoslav governments must not be allowed to veto the results of this referendum, or it will be rendered meaningless — or, even worse, will invite more violence.

The task ahead is not easy, but it is achievable if effective diplomacy is backed by the credible threat of the use of NATO force.

Dayton would not have come about without the U.S. Congress's voting overwhelmingly to lift the arms embargo against the Bosnians and NATO, in turn, deciding instead to bomb Serbian targets. U.S. leaders and NATO must now show the same resolve.

The writer, the Republican presidential nominee in 1996, contributed this comment to The New York Times.

U.S. Troops Must Be There in Force and Prepared for a Long Stay

By Tim Judah

LONDON — As negotiators begin peace talks on the status of Kosovo, General Henry Shelton, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has started the U.S. Congress with the news that a "very low" number of American troops might soon be sent to the region. It should not have come as such a surprise.

Over the last two months, as it has become clear that a NATO-led peacekeeping force would eventually have to be sent to Kosovo, it has become equally clear that such a force would have to include American troops. The experience of Bosnia teaches that a force whose main members are Europeans lacks essential political components.

It would leave room for doubt about a general Western commitment to end the war. It would risk of what is being called "NATO lie." It would also leave room for the parties to maneuver and manipulate, and so to reopen all the divisions and vulnerabilities that almost brought NATO to its knees during the Bosnian war.

During the Bosnia conflict, every time something awful happened, the cry went up in Washington: "Bomb the Serbs!" Until after the Dayton accords of 1995, the United States had no troops in Bosnia, and no potential hostages.

Meanwhile, the largely European United Nations force was constantly under sniper fire, and hundreds of its troops were used as human shields by the Bosnian Serbs toward the end of the war.

To its European allies — as well as to the warring factions in the Balkans — the American government gave an impression of hypocrisy and weakness, of wanting to fight the war in Bosnia down to the last British or French soldier. Leaders in London and Paris are determined never to put themselves in that situation again, even if their nations' troops are wearing NATO helmets rather than United Nations ones.

Besides these European governments, Kosovo's ethnic Albanians themselves are demanding that American troops be included in any peacekeeping force. They believe that the Serbs will be discouraged from trying to take advantage of any force that includes Americans.

That view was reinforced last year after two French Army officers, who were allegedly pro-Serb, were accused of leaking classified NATO information to Belgrade. As one member of the Kosovo Liberation Army's de facto cabinet put it, "The French are no better than the Russians."

From the purely military point of view, the American intelligence-gathering capacity is a much-needed asset. In Bosnia, the Americans never exploited the full potential of their satellites and other spy technology until their own troops were at risk on the ground.

The presence of American troops in any NATO force would carry real psychological weight for the various local factions, and I do not mean in a merely symbolic sense. In the weeks and months after the entrance of American troops into Bosnia, after the Dayton accords, no one there could fail to be impressed by the sheer intimidating, physical presence of the United States military.

I remember how the American bases bristled with vast quantities of lethal hardware, how their tanks dwarfed anything driven by the locals. The message was clear: Do not mess with us. And it has worked. The United States has not suffered any casualties in Bosnia.

In fact, that tough message was reinforced by the Dayton agreement, which gave NATO virtual carte blanche to enforce its will in Bosnia.

Much as the Serbs may resent it, it is assumed that the Western powers will demand the same in Kosovo.

If the talks outside Paris result in an American force going to Kosovo, surely some critics in Congress and elsewhere will demand to know when those troops will be coming home. They should be prepared to wait a long time.

American soldiers have been stationed in Europe, with good reason, for more than half a century. If a small fraction of them have to sit, for the next generation, doing a far more useful job in the Balkans than they can possibly do today in Bavaria, then so be it.

An enforced, unhappy peace in Kosovo — like in Bosnia — is better than an endless war that might spread.

Mr. Judah, author of "The Serbs: History, Myth and the Destruction of Yugoslavia," covered the war in the Balkans for The Economist from 1991 to 1995. He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

Did an American General Give Comfort to Saddam?

By A.M. Rosenthal

NEW YORK — The timing was magnificent. As Secretary of State Madeleine Albright was crisscrossing the Middle East to round up support for the administration's policy of helping the Iraqi opposition overthrow Saddam Hussein, the American general commanding U.S. forces in the Middle East was once again proclaiming that the idea stinks.

Magnificent, that is, for Saddam. In one winter, first he destroys the UN arms inspection commission. Then he surges ahead in the Middle East political war eight years after he lost the military war to U.S.-led forces. And now, unexpected desert, along comes the United States to prove it did not have either policy to deal with his resurgence or a president who could command a commander.

It must be delectable humor for Saddam to listen to General Anthony Zinni, the Marine Corps commander and the ranking U.S. general in the Middle East, put down the Clinton administration by saying that a "weak, chaotic and fragmented" Iraq is more dangerous than a combined Iraq, and totally dismisses the Iraqi opposition.

That leaves Saddam to wonder which policy, if any, Washington would use to try to deal with Iraq, and which American, if any, is in charge.

Imagine all the mixed signals U.S. officials concede he is getting now. Imagine the lives Saddam can take if he picks a signal that convinces him that America's government is so muddled and divided that he can strike again.

General Zinni's claim that a weak, fragmented Iraq, presumably after rebellion, is more of a danger than a contained Saddam is not information. It is an opinion that much of the administration rejects.

The removal of Saddam might give Iraqi opposition minorities some of their lands to live in, with a taste of freedom — but the horror of it all escapes me. The State Department is said by an anonymous official to disagree with the general, and finds his comments neither helpful or pleasing.

One way for the administration to deal with General Zinni's persistent public denigrating of administration planning, what there is of it, is to use presidential power to fire him.

That might convince Saddam, our enemies and our occasional allies at the UN that the United States is still brain-alive about the Iraqi danger and perhaps capable of creating a united policy to deal with it.

What about the general's own rights? If the president does not want to remove him, can the government decently reduce his ability to speak his mind on policy dangers he may see?

Yes, General Zinni chose a career that does control that right and often reduces it — in public. In private meetings, civilian, military or mixed, he has the duty to speak fully. Before congressional committees, he can request private sessions on matters he thinks might damage American interests, which some of his comments do.

If stifling some of his opinions in public damages his own sense of duty, he has an honorable way out, too little chosen by U.S. officials. He can resign and speak up. That should satisfy his own sense of duty — and not confuse the Iraqis into another disaster for them and the countries Saddam stalks.

—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

U.S. Has to Lead in Market Reform

By Tom Plate

DAVOS, Switzerland — A battle is brewing over reform of the world economy, and the United States may wind up on the wrong side of the fight.

The debate involves whether the financial crisis in Asia and South America raises an urgent need for major reforms of the international capital-flow system. At Davos, which hosts the annual meeting of the World Economic Forum, the position of the United States came across as critical about what has been done in response to the Asia crisis, even by the widely criticized IMF.

This was especially true of the U.S. Treasury secretary, Robert Rubin, who said, "I believe that, on balance, the international community, including the IMF, has made sensible judgments in confronting these complexities."

While Mr. Rubin did not rule out reform, the tenor of his address was less of mounting concern than of caution. Washington's lack of enthusiasm for financial innovations generally spells death. And, in front of an assemblage of business chiefs, world leaders, intellectuals and academics, Mr. Rubin pretty much dumped all over proposals to impose controls on short-term foreign cash investments, in foreign stock and national currencies, that can be removed from a country overnight. This phenomenon has been identified as a precipitant of the world's currency crises.

Not surprisingly, much of the rest of the world regards major financial reforms as matters of global urgency.

Guillermo Ortiz Martínez, governor of the Bank of Mexico, predicted that the people of the world would be increasingly turned off by the ill side effects of a globe ever more economically intertwined: "It is difficult to explain to a Mexican housewife why she has to pay higher interest rates on her housing loan because Russia has defaulted."

An anti-globalization bomb is building up and may explode unless President Bill Clinton convinces his Treasury secretary that America has to do more than shoot down every reform idea.

America's lack of urgency was on evident display when, in a panel on corporate responsibility, the heads of McDonald's and Coca-Cola left many in the audience frustrated with their bromide expressions of minimal social responsibility. These CEOs had little to offer that was new to an audience that knows full well that Mr. Rubin is unlikely to get cracking on world reforms unless the U.S. corporate world lights a fire under him. Even with their limited ethical vistas, corporations will find it in their financial interest to take a more active role in helping America do better than rely on what George Soros dangles as "free-market fundamentalism."

The longer they support the status quo on reform, the more they will put at risk the functioning of the world economy as foreign markets vaporize.

The day, if not the conference, was saved by a moving address from Nelson Mandela. The South African president, who is stepping down later this year, had words of rebuke for those who are prospering from the current turmoil: "Is globalization only to benefit the powerful and the financiers, speculators, investors and traders?" he said. "Does it offer nothing to men, women and children who are ravaged by the violence of poverty?"

Mr. Clinton needs the passion of Mr. Mandela if U.S. antipathy to reform is not to block progress. Everyone at this conference understood that the United States remained the only country capable of providing the leadership needed to tackle what even Mr. Rubin admitted was "the most serious financial crisis of the last 50 years." But towering problems require large and innovative actions by determined and committed minds. The Clinton administration needs to understand that a do-nothing attitude about worldwide currency flows and pat, sit-tight pure-market policy proposals for almost every global financial problem will put it in history's dust. America must regain momentum on this issue — or the moment for worldwide reform will be lost.

—Los Angeles Times Service.

IN OUR PAGES: 100, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

1899: Manila Attack

WASHINGTON — Intense excitement has been aroused here by the dispatches from Manila announcing the outbreak of hostilities between the American and the insurgent forces. The Government has known for weeks past that a crisis was imminent. Aginaldo's Washington representative recently warned the Government that if any American reinforcements landed the native army would attack them.

1924: German Affront

WASHINGTON — The German Embassy failed to half-mast its flag and did not join in tokens of respect to the memory of the man who was Chief Executive of the American nation during the World War and whose effort in sending an army abroad resulted in the defeat of Germany in that conflict. Baron Leopold Plessen, Third Secretary of the Embassy, said: "The German Government considers the late Mr. Wilson a private citizen. Therefore it instructed the Embassy to refrain from any official display of mourning."

1949: Hunting Rights

FRANKFURT — Bavarian aristocrats are up in arms because of an American Military Government order to "democratize" the sport of hunting. Baron Wolfgang von Beck, chief of the Bavarian State Hunting Department, resigned. Permitting every German over eighteen the right to hunt and fish makes "a cheap business of what used to be a sport and recreation," he said. Formerly licenses to shoot and fish were the exclusive prerogative of the upper classes. Baron von Beck is also angered at the proviso which permits American occupation soldiers equal rights with Germans in this sport.

Herald Tribune

ESTABLISHED 1887

KATHARINE GRAHAM, ARTHUR OCHS SULZBERGER
Co-Chairmen of the BoardPETER C. GOLDMARK JR., Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
RICHARD WOOLDRIDGE, President and Chief Operating Officer

MICHAEL GETTLER, Executive Editor

WALTER WELLS, Managing Editor • PAUL HORVITZ, Deputy Managing Editor

KATHERINE KNORR and CHARLES MITCHELMORE, Deputy Editors

ROBERT J. DONAHUE, Editor of the Editorial Pages

JONATHAN GAGE, Business and Finance Editor

SAMUEL ABE and NICK STOUT, Associate Editors

RENÉ BONDY, Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer

DIDER BRUN, Circulation and Development Director

STEPHEN DUNBAR-JOHNSON, Advertising Director • IAN WALTHER, Marketing Director

Directeur de la Publication: Peter C. Goldmark Jr.

International Herald Tribune, 181 Avenue Charles-de-Gaulle, 92221 Nanterre-la-Seine, France

Tel: (1) 41-43.93.00. Fax: Subscriptions, (1) 41-43.92.10; Advertising, (1) 41-43.92.12; News, (1) 41-43.93.38

Internet address: <http://www.ihb.com> E-Mail: ihb@ihb.com

Editor for Asia: Michael Richardson, 5 Cuscumbury Rd., Singapore 11800. Tel: (65) 472-7768. Fax: (65) 274-2334

Mag. Dir. Asia, Nigel I. Cohen, #1201, 191 Jena Road, Hong Kong. Tel: 852-2922-1183. Fax: 852-2922-1190

Gen. Mgr. Germany: T. Schöler, Friedrichstr. 15, 10117 Berlin. Tel: +49 30 90991230-0. Fax: +49 30 90991230-20

U.S. Office: 130 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. Tel: (212) 732-3890. Fax: (212) 732-8725

U.S. Advertising Office: 40 Marsh Wall, London E14 9TF. Tel: (171) 510-5700. Fax: (171) 587-3451

U.S. ad capital of 1,200,000 P. RCS Number: B 732221126. Conventions Periodic No. 61337

©1999 International Herald Tribune. All rights reserved. ISSN: 0294-8022.

1949: Hunting Rights
FRANKFURT Ravens and jackrabbits are up in arms because of an American Military General's order to "denaturalize" the sport of hunting. Ravens Wolfgang von Beck, chief of the Bavarian State Hunting Department, resigned. Permitting German over eighteen years of age to hunt and take makes it the business of what used to be called sport and recreation. He said formerly lacemakers to show the fish were the exclusive property of the upper classes. The von Beck is also angered at the grounds which permit American occupational soldiers equal rights in this sport.

FIDELITY ORIENT FUND
Société d'Investissement à Capital Variable
Knechtel House - Place de l'Eclair
B.P. 2174, L-1021 Luxembourg
R.C. Luxembourg B 19061

NOTICE OF ADJOURNED EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL MEETING

Extraordinary General Meeting of January 19, 1999 did not reach the quorum of 50% required by law, notice is given that an Extraordinary General Meeting of Shareholders of Fidelity Orient Fund Sica (the "Company") will be the engineered office of the Company in Luxembourg on February 22, 1999 at 11.00 a.m. to consider the agenda:

to resolve to liquidate the Company, to appoint Fidelity Investments Luxembourg S.A. as the Liquidator and to determine the powers to be granted to the Liquidator and the Liquidation procedure.

in the date of the second Shareholders' Meeting to hear the Report of the Liquidator and to appoint Ernst & Young, Luxembourg as Auditors to the liquidation of the Company.

in the date of the third Shareholders' Meeting to hear the Report of the Auditor and to resolve to close the liquidation of the Company.

A quorum of shares present or represented at the Meeting is required in order to deliberate validly on the agenda. A majority in favour of the Resolution no. 1 of the agenda must be approved by Shareholders holding at least 2/3 of the shares present at the Meeting.

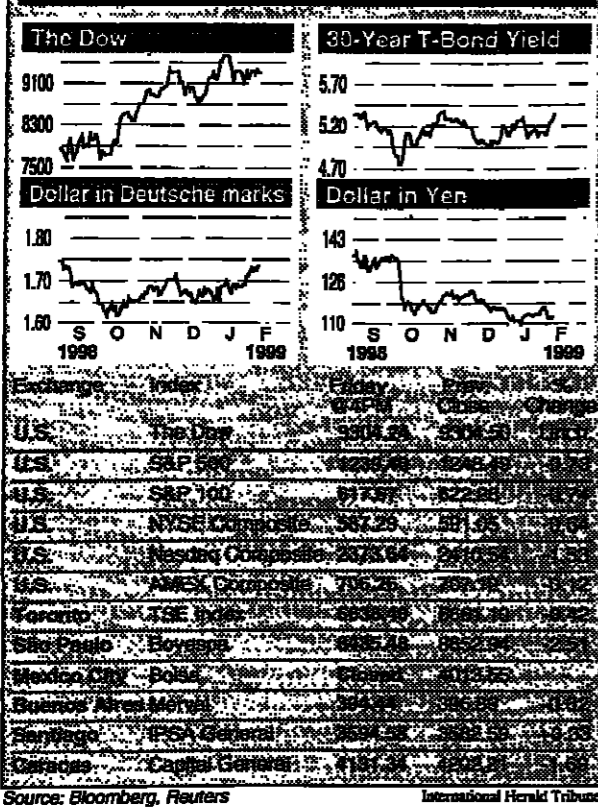

in the Resolution imposed by the Articles of Incorporation of the Company with regard to ownership of shares, the maximum number of shares that any one person may own is 10% of the outstanding shares, each share is entitled to one vote. Shareholders may set at any Meeting of Shareholders by proxy.

of the Board of Directors
February 4, 1999

Fidelity Investments

THE AMERICAS

Investor's America

U.S. Fed Resolves to Speak Clearly on Rates

By Richard W. Stevenson
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—The Federal Reserve Board plans to be somewhat more open about its secretive policy deliberations, saying it would signal more clearly whether it was leaning toward higher or lower interest rates.

Continuing a glacial drift toward greater disclosure, the central bank's policy-making Federal Open Market Committee said Thursday that it had made two changes to the way it will announce and describe actions.

The committee decided to drop oblique wording in the policy statement adopted at each meeting about the likelihood of future rate increases or decreases and replace it with a more direct statement.

Instead of forcing readers to discern its leanings from the juxtaposition of the words "would" and "might" in describing the possible course of rate changes — a code long familiar to Fed watchers — the central bank Thursday released its policy statement from December, proclaiming its neutrality on future rate changes in something approaching plain English.

"In view of the evidence currently available, the committee believes that the economic developments are equally likely to warrant an increase or decrease" in the Fed's key interest rate, the policy statement said.

The committee also decided that it would from time to time accelerate disclosure of any changes in its assessment of the likely direction of rate changes. Rather than disclosing any change in its "bias" toward higher or lower rates right after the following meeting, as it has been practicing now, the Fed would make the change public immediately on those occasions when it wanted its intentions made clear to the public and the financial markets right away.

Alan Greenspan, the Fed chairman, has been wrestling for years with the issue about the tension between his desire to follow tradition's traditional secrecy and his desire to protect the confidentiality of the central bank's policy debates.

Yet he also wants to assuage critics in Congress who feel the Fed should be more accountable and might push for more sweeping changes if the Fed does not act on its own to become more open. Most of all Mr. Greenspan wants to avoid surprising the financial markets, whose ups and downs can have a pronounced effect on the economy.

Eager to avoid destabilizing policy surprises, Mr. Greenspan has taken to giving the markets relatively clear warnings of changes in the direction of interest rates.

In September, he had first hinted at and then almost flatly promised rate reductions in the weeks before the Fed embarked on three rate cuts.

Hedge Fund Rescuers Get Mixed News

By Joseph Kahn
New York Times Service

NEW YORK -- The Wall Street firms that rescued the giant hedge fund Long-Term Capital Management LP last autumn actually made a modest profit on their investment and the hedge fund is not as risky as it once was.

But at a gathering Thursday of executives who participated in the bailout, the firms' hopes of getting their money back quickly were dashed.

For the first time since late September, when the firms injected $3.6 billion to save Long-Term Capital from bankruptcy, top executives from Citicorp, J.P. Morgan & Co., Goldman Sachs & Co., Morgan Stanley, Dean Witter & Co., Citigroup, and other consortium members discussed the hedge fund's performance and debated its future.

People who attended the meeting said that all of the consortium members had reaffirmed their commitment to the fund, at least for the immediate future.

The meeting came amid speculation about the stability of the consortium and talks of a rift between the fund's two main partners, led by J. P. Meriwether, and the Wall Street banks and brokerage firms that control 90 percent of its assets.

Executives attending the meeting Thursday learned that from the time they had invested in Long-Term Capital until the end of last year, the value of their investments rose by 11 percent after subtracting fees and expenses, people close to the fund said. The portfolio continued to post small gains in January.

The executives also were told that the risk profile of the portfolio had been "substantially" reduced.

■ Investors Stay With Funds

Geraldine Fabrikant of The New York Times reported:

Although predictions of heavy withdrawals were rampant, investors probably withdrew about 5 percent of hedge funds after the roller coaster 1998, according to estimates by several companies that track the industry.

Precise figures are hard to come by because the industry is unregulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission and thus is not required to report numbers. But three leading companies, each of which tracks a different group of hedge funds, differ only slightly on the overall annual results.

ibes in Business

Technology Stocks Drag Down the Market

NEW YORK — U.S. stocks fell Friday as some underlying strength in the broader market was outweighed by the continued slide of technology stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed 0.26 points lower at 9,304.24, while the Standard & Poor's 500 Index closed 9.09 points lower at 1,239.40. The Nasdaq composite lost 36.43 points to close at 2,373.64.

On the New York Stock Exchange, declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by a 17-to-11 ratio.

Overall weakness in technology stocks was compounded by the chipmakers. Advanced Micro

Prospect of L

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against the yen Friday on expectations that Japan would try to drive down long-term bond yields, reducing the incentive for Japanese companies to bring home more of their overseas earnings.

Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa indicated that he wanted the Bank of Japan to buy more 10-year government bonds. That could help climb in rates that threatens to worsen the nation's recession by driving up borrowing costs.

"Lower yields are generally bad

U.S. STOCKS

AMMD dragged its competitors lower as well, with Micron Technology falling 5% to 70 1/4 and Texas Instruments sliding 3% to 94 1/4.

The continued decline of technology stocks has worried some analysts about the impact on the broader market. High-flying tech companies have been largely responsible for the market's overall advances, leading some to fear that the technology bubble bursts, and the entire market will cave in. Computer-related stocks also suffered. Apple Computer fell 9/16 to 36 5/8, while Cisco Systems, the biggest networking equipment company, fell 4 to 100 1/4. Dell Computer fell 15/16 to 10 1/2. Gateway fell 2/4 to 74, while Microsoft dropped 15/16, to 160.

Technology was not the only weak sector Friday. Brokerage firms were lower, from blue-chip stocks like Merrill Lynch, which fell 24 to 70 13/16, to on-line brokerage firms which began tumbling Thursday after the New York state attorney general announced an inquiry into their business practices. E*Trade, which was hammered by technical difficulties on several occasions Wednesday through Friday fell 4 13/16, to 48 11/16.

American Homestair fell 1 15/16 to 8 3/16 as the manufactured-housing maker said it expects weak results for its third quarter.

Stocks failed to get much support from a government report that showed the U.S. jobless rate held steady in January at 4.3 percent. Instead, the yield on the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond climbed 5.35 percent from 5.29 percent to the price of the bond fell 25/32, to 20/32. That rate is a barometer for long-term borrowing costs for consumers and businesses.

(AP, Bloomberg)

Very briefly:

- CBS Corp. perched a $1 million net loss in the fourth quarter because of clearance payments to former Chairman Michael Jordan and losses from the sale of stakes in two cable networks. A year earlier, it earned $861 million. Excluding charges, the network earned $7 million, against a loss of $10 million a year ago.
- BP Amoco PLC plans to cut 1,500 management and non-management jobs, or almost 25 percent of the work force, in the Chicago area in the next 18 months.
- Motorola Inc. and Alcatel Alsthom agreed to cooperate on a joint research agreement that also requires the American mobile-phone giant to buy approximately $1 billion worth of products from the French maker of telecommunications equipment over the next four years.
- The Fedex Pilots Association approved a five-year contract with Federal Express Corp., after nearly six years of talks. The 3,600 flight crew members will get a 17 percent pay raise over the five years.
- Ziff-Davis Inc. plans to spin off up to 20 percent of the publisher's ZDNet on-line business by early next month via a public offering.
- AgriEvo, the agrochemicals joint venture of Hoechst AG and Schering AG, has withdrawn from an agreement to buy Cargill Hybrid Seeds from Cargill Inc.
- Canada's unemployment rate fell to 7.8 percent in January, its lowest level since 1950, as strong manufacturing growth helped create 87,400 jobs. The rate was 8 percent in December.
- Carrefour SA is spending 100 million reais ($55.1 million) to build five supermarkets in Brazil this year, a Sao Paulo newspaper reported, reviving the French retailer's expansion plans.
- Gateway Inc. is expanding a Virginia plant and adding 1,000 workers to meet rising demand for its personal computers.
- St. Jude Medical Inc. agreed to pay $167 million in cash for the Tyco International Ltd. Angio-Seal unit that produces artery-closing devices.
- AP, Bloomberg, AFP, Reuters

Prospect of Lower Bond Yields Hurts Yen

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against the yen Friday on expectations that Japan would try to drive down long-term bond yields, reducing the incentive for Japanese companies to bring home more of their overseas earnings.

Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa indicated that he wanted the Bank of Japan to buy more 10-year government bonds. That could help climb in rates that threatens to worsen the nation's recession by driving up borrowing costs.

"Lower yields are generally bad for a currency, especially when they are already about 2 percent lower than anywhere else in the world. He said Malcolm Gilroy of Laketon Investment Management in Toronto.

In 4 P.M. trading in New York,

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

The dollar was quoted at 113.220 yen, up from 112.025 yen Thursday.

Mr. Gilroy predicted that the dollar would climb above 125 yen in the next six months because he expected the recession in Japan to deepen.

"I'm quite bearish on the yen," he

New Beer Takes A Tequila Twist

The Associated Press
ST. LOUIS, Missouri — Anheuser-Busch Cos. has combined the flavors of tequila and lime to make its new beer, Tequila, due in stores Monday. The name of the beer is a cross between tequila and the Spanish word for beer, cerveza. The brewer said it created the beer because many beer drinkers squirt lime in their beer and drink tequila on the side. The 5 percent alcohol content equals that of Budweiser beer.

U. S. STOCK MARKET DIARY

[illegible]

INTERNATIONAL FUTURES

	High	Low	Last	Chg	Opt		High	Low	Last	Chg	Opt
RUSS JUDGE (ONTCN)						3-MONTH SWISS FRANK (LIFFE)
Feb 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	SF 1 nearest: 1/8 of 100 pct	Mar 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 99	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 99	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 00	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 00	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 01	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 01	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 02	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 02	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 03	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 03	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 04	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 04	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jul 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Aug 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Aug 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Sep 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Sep 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Oct 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Oct 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Nov 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Nov 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Dec 05	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Dec 05	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jan 06	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jan 06	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Feb 06	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Feb 06	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Mar 06	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Mar 06	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Apr 06	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Apr 06	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	May 06	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
May 06	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jun 06	96.00	95.80	95.80	0.00	15.87
Jun 06	105.75	105.25	105.25	-0.48	15.87	121.200 coupon	Jul

SCENE: Bribes in Business

Continued from Page 9

Some of the most enthusiastic scholarship-givers are the world's insurance companies, which are required to open offices in China for a number of years before being allowed to do any business in one of the world's most promising insurance markets.

"Foreign companies are investing in China and in its developing insurance industry by providing resources for insurance education," the journal of Britain's Society of Chartered Property & Casualty Underwriters reported last year.

While these scholarships are officially for the purpose of fostering education on the matter of insurance, Mr. Wimmer of Pinkerton's noted that companies may have little or no control over who would benefit from the money donated.

How different is this practice from what Sydney, host of the 2000 Summer Games, did by setting up a trust fund for athletes from 11 poor African countries and giving money to two African Olympic Committees in exchange for votes?

While the international anti-bribery convention will constitute a start in wiping out practices such as those that surfaced in the Olympics scandal, it will hardly mean an end to bribery overnight, considering the persistence of noncash inducements — and the use of local agents by American companies despite the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

One way forward, according to Transparency International, is something called an "integrity pact," in which all competing bidders for a government project promise not to offer bribes.

The result of many integrity pacts is the finding that companies only like to bribe because they suspect that if they do not, their competitors will, said Fritz Heimann, general counsel for General Electric Co. in the United States and a founding member of Transparency International.

A typical response from many companies that would prefer to keep clean, he said, is: "If the choice is losing an order or holding our noses, we go ahead and pay a bribe."

INTEREST RATES

[illegible]

EUROPE

Russian Duma Clears Lean Budget for '99

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

MOSCOW — In a rare show of cooperation, the lower house of Russia's Parliament approved the government's 1999 budget Friday, a document essential to the country's effort to win vital loans.

Unlike in recent years, when the Duma bickered for months over the budget, Communists and their allies who dominate the Parliament approved the budget with little debate, displaying support for Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov's cabinet.

The final vote was 308 to 58.

The budget proposal reflected Russia's desperate condition. It called for government spending of just $25 billion and revenue of $21 billion for the year. Deputies kept arguments to a minimum in part because there was little room to argue over the limited funds. The document now goes to the upper house of Parliament and then to President Boris Yeltsin.

In good news for the cabinet, tax collection in January exceeded the plan by 18 percent, bringing the equivalent of $890 million into government coffers.

The draft budget projected inflation at 30 percent this year, with the dollar quoted at an average exchange rate of 21.5 rubles. But the dollar has already risen to 23 rubles, and inflation in January alone reached 8.5 percent.

Despite the budget's passage, prospects for a new loan from the International Monetary Fund remained dim. The Fund said it made progress in loan talks with Russia's government on Friday, although it did not reach agreement on all of Russia's economic policies or new loans.

The IMF has said the government's revenue targets are unrealistic, and Fund officials wanted to see how the government implements the budget over the next three months before making a decision.

(AP, Bloomberg)

Primakov Targets Magnate

David Hoffman of The Washington Post reported earlier from Moscow:

A collision between Mr. Primakov and one of Russia's most highly visible tycoons, Boris Beresovsky, intensified as masked, camouflaged special troops raided an office affiliated with Aeroflot, the national airline in which Mr. Beresovsky has had major interests.

The raids Thursday marked the second time this week that investigators stormed into a business linked to Mr. Beresovsky.

On Tuesday, they seized documents and videotapes from Sibneft, a leading oil company that also has ties to Mr. Beresovsky. They said they found evidence that he ran an intelligence operation to tap the phones of Mr. Yeltsin's family.

Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov speaking with First Deputy Prime Minister Yuri Maslyukov on Friday in Moscow during a debate in the Russian Parliament on the country's 1999 budget.

After years of lackadaisical or nonexistent enforcement of anti-corruption laws, the sudden police raids were unusual. They seemed aimed squarely at the financial interests of Mr. Beresovsky, the political high roller who has long been considered the most outspoken among Russia's well-connected magnates.

Mr. Beresovsky opposed Mr. Pri-makov's appointment last summer after the Aug. 17 ruble devaluation and currency crisis. Mr. Beresovsky often has insisted that government officials heed the demands of Russia's big businessmen.

Mr. Primakov, the former head of Russia's foreign intelligence service, has close ties to law enforcement agencies and is believed by many observers to be behind the latest raids. He said over the weekend that he would clear out the jails to make room for corrupt capitalists.

Growth Slows In Europe's Air Traffic

Bloomberg News

BRUSSELS — European airline traffic growth slowed to 7.7 percent in 1998, the lowest in five years, as carriers shifted flights to North Atlantic routes, resulting in supply exceeding demand.

The slowdown from 10.1 percent growth in 1997, a 10-year high, came as recessions in Asia prompted airlines to switch to the more profitable North Atlantic routes, the Association of European Airlines said Friday.

Traffic to the Far East still grew 3.8 percent in 1998, though that was slower than earlier in the decade. European carriers such as British Airways PLC say they still face "tough economic conditions" because of Asia, where BA and KLM Royal Dutch Airlines NV get as much as a fifth of operating profit.

"Most of the diversion to North Atlantic routes has already taken place now and airlines are already scaling back capacity growth," said Andrew Light, an analyst at Salomon Smith Barney Inc. "Alliances will help bring discipline to capacity, as fewer carriers will operate along those routes."

Carriers raised capacity by 10.1 percent in 1998 on North Atlantic routes — the most profitable of all — outpacing demand, which rose 8.4 percent.

Airlines filled 72 percent of seats on average in 1998, a drop of 0.3 percent from 1997, said the association, which collects data on passenger and freight traffic for its 27 major airline members.

Passenger traffic in Europe rose 8.3 percent, to 120.25 billion revenue passenger kilometers, the total number of flying passengers multiplied by the distance flown. Within Europe, traffic on South Atlantic routes, which includes those to Brazil, Argentina and Chile, rose most, gaining 13.3 percent, to 21.3 billion passenger kilometers.

In December, passenger traffic rose 7.4 percent from December 1997, to 36.6 billion passenger kilometers. On North Atlantic routes, traffic rose 9.2 percent, to 10.5 billion passenger kilometers.

Nokia Chairman Is Stepping Down

Bloomberg News

HELSINKI — Nokia Oy announced Friday that Casimir Ehrnrooth would resign as chairman of the world's largest maker of the cell phones and that Bengt Holmstrom would become a board member.

While Nokia did not specify why Mr. Ehrnrooth, 67, is resigning, the Finnish retiree is 65.

Mr. Holmstrom is an economics professor at the Boston-based Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Surging Minivan Sales Lift Renault

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

PARIS — Renault SA said Friday that sales rose 17.3 percent in 1998 as demand boomed for its Megane minivan, helping it capture market share from rivals such as Ford Motor Co.

Sales rose to 243.9 billion francs ($42.06 billion) from 207.9 billion francs a year earlier, Renault said.

Renault is benefiting from a recovery in the European car market and efficiency measures that trimmed 3,850 francs from the cost of building each car over two years. Innovative new models, such as the revamped Clio small car and the Kangoo light utility truck, helped push sales to a record 2.1 million vehicles in 1998.

"Pretty convincing performance all around," said Simon Miller, an analyst with Credit Lyonnais Securities in London. "Renault's showing is noticeably better than Peugeot's, and the full-year profit figures will most likely reflect that."

Renault cited a sharp rise in sales in most of Europe and said it had won back first place in France from PSA Peugeot Citroen SA by gaining almost two percentage points in market share.

After earning 5.43 billion francs in 1997, Renault said it expects a "significant" rise in 1998 profit. It expects 3 percent growth in vehicle sales in 1999 for the combined European market, which rose 7 percent last year. Economists expect growth between 1 percent and 3 percent.

Renault will report its full results for 1998 on March 1, two days ahead of Peugeot, which posted an 11.2 percent rise in 1998 sales Tuesday.

Renault shares closed at 43.10 euros ($48.54) on Thursday, up 2 cents. (Bloomberg, Bridge News)

WORLD STOCK MARKETS

Friday, Feb. 5

Prices in local currencies. In euro for EMU countries.

Tollers

High Low Close Prev.

Amsterdam AEX index: 3434

Prices: 3434

Frankfurt DAX index: 3987.7

Prices: 3987.7

Johannesburg All Share: 3843.21

Prices: 3843.21

London FTSE 100: 5855.30

Prices: 5855.30

Madrid IBEX 35: 2945.40

Prices: 2945.40

Paris CAC 40: 4167.42

Prices: 4167.42

Stockholm OMX: 1494.23

Prices: 1494.23

Tel Aviv TA-35: 1511.15

Prices: 1511.15

Tokyo Nikkei 225: 12112.15

Prices: 12112.15

Hong Kong Hang Seng: 7193.28

Prices: 7193.28

Singapore SENSEX: 2277.57

Prices: 2277.57

Buenos Aires Merval: 264.89

Prices: 264.89

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

High Low Close Prev.

Amsterdam AEX index: 3434

Prices: 3434

Frankfurt DAX index: 3987.7

Prices: 3987.7

Johannesburg All Share: 3843.21

Prices: 3843.21

London FTSE 100: 5855.30

Prices: 5855.30

Madrid IBEX 35: 2945.40

Prices: 2945.40

Paris CAC 40: 4167.42

Prices: 4167.42

Stockholm OMX: 1494.23

Prices: 1494.23

Tel Aviv TA-35: 1511.15

Prices: 1511.15

Tokyo Nikkei 225: 12112.15

Prices: 12112.15

Hong Kong Hang Seng: 7193.28

Prices: 7193.28

Singapore SENSEX: 2277.57

Prices: 2277.57

Buenos Aires Merval: 264.89

Prices: 264.89

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

High Low Close Prev.

Amsterdam AEX index: 3434

Prices: 3434

Frankfurt DAX index: 3987.7

Prices: 3987.7

Johannesburg All Share: 3843.21

Prices: 3843.21

London FTSE 100: 5855.30

Prices: 5855.30

Madrid IBEX 35: 2945.40

Prices: 2945.40

Paris CAC 40: 4167.42

Prices: 4167.42

Stockholm OMX: 1494.23

Prices: 1494.23

Tel Aviv TA-35: 1511.15

Prices: 1511.15

Tokyo Nikkei 225: 12112.15

Prices: 12112.15

Hong Kong Hang Seng: 7193.28

Prices: 7193.28

Singapore SENSEX: 2277.57

Prices: 2277.57

Buenos Aires Merval: 264.89

Prices: 264.89

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

High Low Close Prev.

Amsterdam AEX index: 3434

Prices: 3434

Frankfurt DAX index: 3987.7

Prices: 3987.7

Johannesburg All Share: 3843.21

Prices: 3843.21

London FTSE 100: 5855.30

Prices: 5855.30

Madrid IBEX 35: 2945.40

Prices: 2945.40

Paris CAC 40: 4167.42

Prices: 4167.42

Stockholm OMX: 1494.23

Prices: 1494.23

Tel Aviv TA-35: 1511.15

Prices: 1511.15

Tokyo Nikkei 225: 12112.15

Prices: 12112.15

Hong Kong Hang Seng: 7193.28

Prices: 7193.28

Singapore SENSEX: 2277.57

Prices: 2277.57

Buenos Aires Merval: 264.89

Prices: 264.89

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

Copenhagen NASDAQ: 687.20

Prices: 687.20

ASIA/PACIFIC

Japan to Provide Indonesia With $2.4 Billion in Loans

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

JAKARTA — Japan said Friday it would provide $2.4 billion in loans to Indonesia under a $30 billion plan set up to help Asia's struggling economies.

Indonesian officials had been expecting $3 billion. Among Japan's other recipients, Thailand has been granted $1.85 billion and Malaysia has been pledged $1.5 billion.

The Japanese government said the support package would be a combination of loans by the Export-Import Bank of Japan and the Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund.

A press statement issued by Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa also announced that Tokyo was considering providing interest payment assistance to Indonesia under the Asian Currency Crisis Support Facility currently being worked on in cooperation with the Asian Development Bank.

The Japanese statement said the package "will be the first step in the Japanese government's effort in assisting Indonesia under the framework of the 'New Miyazawa Initiative.'"

Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa announced the $30 billion initiative for Asia when he attended a meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized countries held in Washington in October.

The Miyazawa plan will run for two years, and about half of that money has been disbursed already, with the largest slice going to Indonesia, said Eisuke Sakakibara, Japan's deputy finance minister for international affairs, who announced the loan in Jakarta on Friday.

The money for Indonesia is in addition to funds pledged by Japan under the $49 billion bailout organized by the International Monetary Fund.

Indonesia needs the new money to help finance a $9 billion hole in its budget for the year ended March 2000. About $4 billion of that has been covered by donors such as the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank and other organizations.

Indonesia expects to get the remaining $2.6 billion needed to plug the budget gap from the Consultative Group on Indonesia, a group of its main donor countries. That money may be part of the IMF plan, or may be fresh funding, said Ginandjar Kartasasmita, Indonesia's coordinating minister for economy and finance.

Indonesia's economy is expected to contract for a second year in 1999, suffering from a sharp drop in the value of the rupiah over the past 18 months and the inability of corporate Indonesia to repay about $60 billion in foreign debt.

Mr. Sakakibara dismissed concerns about corruption in the Indonesian government.

"We are very favorably impressed by the measures implemented by this government — particularly the very decisive anti-corruption laws." (Bloomberg, AFP)

■ Fast Track for Lippo Bank?

Indonesia put on hold plans to inject 3.75 trillion rupiah ($433.5 million) into Lippo Bank after allegations were made by some members of the House of Representatives of favoritism, Finance Minister Bambang Subianto said, Bloomberg reported.

The bank, controlled by the Riady family, was included in the first wave of banks to be helped with state aid. The Riadys have been said to have good relations with former President Suharto and his successor, B.J. Habibie.

Air France Pares Service to Japan

Bloomberg News

TOKYO — Air France said Friday that it would suspend its Paris-Nagoya flight starting in March, the latest cutback by a foreign carrier in Japan, where fares and the number of air travelers have fallen amid the nation's worst postwar recession.

Air France said its occupancy rate on the route was about 80 percent, but that it still did not generate enough profit. For many airlines, a seat occupancy of 70 percent or more guarantees adequate profitability.

The setbacks for Air France and other foreign carriers that have suspended flights will benefit Japan Air Lines Co., All Nippon Airways Co. and Japan Air System Co., Japan's three biggest carriers, analysts said.

"Foreign airlines backing off from Japan is a good sign for Japanese airlines," said Douglas Hayashi, a senior analyst at HSBC Securities Japan Inc. "This will allow domestic carriers to increase their market share."

Nevertheless, All Nippon Airways said Friday that it will not hire flight attendants during the financial year starting April 1 as it moves to cut costs.

ANA, which has posted four losses in the last five years, has been hiring an average of about 700 flight attendants a year for the past five years. It currently has about 5,000 flight attendants.

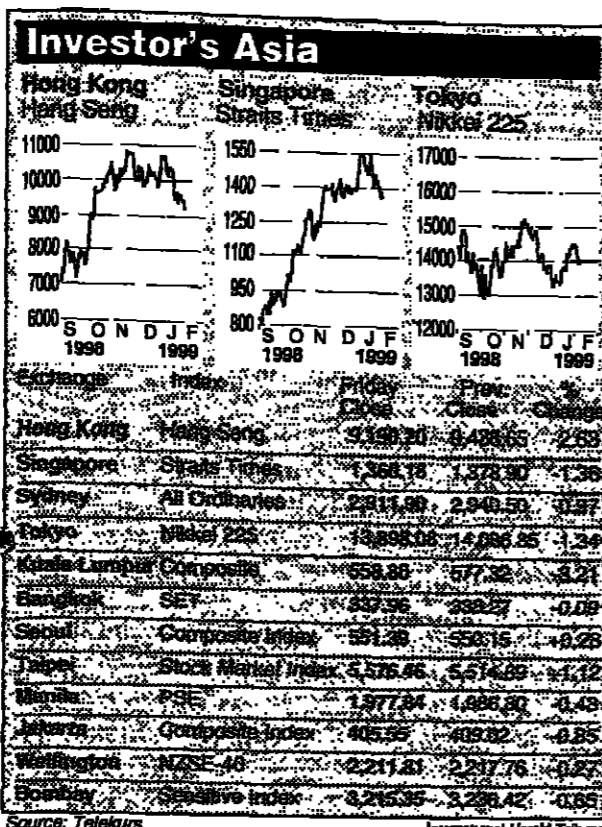

The airline, whose shares are close to a 14-year low, has said it plans to scrap some money-losing routes and cut personnel as Japan's worst recession in 50 years saps demand for leisure and business trips.

UAL Corp.'s United Airlines, Northwest Airlines Corp., and at least six other carriers have suspended some flights between Japan and holiday destinations popular among Japanese tourists such as Hawaii, London and Hong Kong in the past year.

The companies cited lower revenues per passenger and fewer Japanese travelers.

In the past year, trans-Pacific flights dropped by about 20 percent, while air travel between Europe and the Americas increased. Hideki Isayama, passenger marketing manager at United Airlines,

Euro Adds Risks, China Official Says

By Thomas Crampton
International Herald Tribune

BANGKOK — While the euro provides benefits to the world financial system, it may also bring a measure of instability by increasing competition and tensions within Europe, Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan of China said here Friday during an official visit.

From China's point of view, he said, "it is better to link exchange rates to many currencies instead of just one," and the euro, as an alternative to the dollar, allows this.

But he added that the single European currency also has potential to create economic instability and tensions.

"Some economists say the euro will sharpen economic competition within Europe," he said through an interpreter. "I think this opinion is quite correct and whether this brings instability remains to be seen."

Mr. Tang repeated Beijing's pledge not to devalue its currency, the yuan, or slow economic reforms despite the ongoing Asian economic crisis. He said Beijing had already kept the yuan stable through nearly two years of regional economic upheaval, despite China's own difficulties.

Political stability and economic development by China, the world's most populous nation, "is in itself an important contribution to peace and stability of the region and indeed the whole world," he said.

Wider use of the yen remains an option that could help Asia's economic recovery, he said. "Japanese economists are thinking about wider use of the yen, but that alone this is not enough to make the region healthy again," he said.

The fundamental problem facing a common or regional currency in Asia, Mr. Tang said, was the wide disparity of development levels among countries there.

Also on Friday, Mr. Tang signed a 15-point agreement with Foreign Minister Surin Pitsuwan of Thailand that broadly pledges closer cooperation between Beijing and Bangkok in several domains, including trade, macroeconomic policy and finance.

Very briefly:

- Malaysia expects no more than $5 billion in foreign funds to leave the country as capital controls are replaced by an exit tax, said the central bank governor, Ali Abul Hassan Sulaiman.
- Mr. Ali also said he expected the move to attract fresh foreign capital that would "more than offset" the outflow. He did not say how soon the new capital would come in.
- Malaysia's trade surplus widened to a record 6.7 billion ringgit ($1.76 billion) in December, swelling the surplus for all of 1998 to the highest level in at least 14 years. For the full year, the surplus was 58.4 billion ringgit, compared with a surplus of 400 million ringgit in 1997.
- Daiwa Securities Co. has decided not to sell its British banking unit, Daiwa Europe Bank PLC. In October it hired a consultant to help decide whether it would sell the London-based unit as part of its review of all businesses.
- India's software exports rose 68 percent last year, to 95 billion rupees ($2.24 billion), as global demand for Indian software grew, said the National Association of Software and Service Companies. The surge came even as India's total exports fell 2.9 percent in the nine months to December.
- Hong Kong's Hang Seng Index futures contracts will be traded electronically by May and options contracts for the index will be traded in that manner by June, the Hong Kong Futures Exchange said.
- KDD Corp., Japan's largest international phone company, said AT&T Corp. offered to pay part of the cost of sending Internet data traffic between Japan and the United States. KDD and other Asia-based carriers currently pay such costs.
- Samsung Electronics Co.'s net profit surged 153 percent in 1998, to 313 billion won ($267.5 million), due to rises in the price of memory chips.
- Japan's overall wholesale prices fell 4.9 percent in January from the previous year. They had fallen 4.4 percent on a year-to-year basis in December.

Bloomberg, AFP

NOTICE TO THE UNITHOLDERS
Dear Unitholder of:
SKANDIFOND EQUITY FUND

Please be herewith informed about the change of the base currency of the following sub-funds:

SKANDIFOND EQUITY FUND-CONTINENTAL EUROPE
SKANDIFOND EQUITY FUND-MEDITERRANEAN

The EURO currency was implemented on January 1st, 1999. Since these two sub-funds are investing mainly in securities in EURO, the Management Company has decided to change the base currency of these two sub-funds from USD to EURO. The net asset value per unit is expressed in EURO starting 1st January 1999. The investment policy and the denomination of these sub-funds do not change.

The following rules in the Prospectus will remain valid and unchanged, quote:

"The net asset value per unit will be expressed and published in the base currency of the relevant Sub-Fund. The issue and redemption price will also be published in EURO, US Dollars, in Swedish Kronor and in Norwegian Kroner for all Sub-Funds. The exchange rates used for these conversions will be determined on basis of the exchange rates used for the net asset value calculation of the same Valuation Day."

Payment for subscriptions must be made in EURO, US Dollars, Swedish Kronor, Norwegian Kroner or in the base currency of the relevant Sub-Fund.

The Management Company will also quote the redemption price in EURO, US Dollars, in Swedish Kronor and in Norwegian Kroner.

Unquote

Yours very truly,

SKANDIFOND EQUITY FUND MANAGEMENT CO S.A.

IF YOU THOUGHT BEING A GOD WAS EASY, THINK AGAIN.

On Cable and Satellite Tonight

21.30
Q&A with Riz Khan
Viewers from around the world are able to question newsmakers by phone, fax or e-mail in the world's first interactive news show.

22.00
Perspectives

Tonight's in-depth documentary explores the world of the Dalai Lama including exclusive insight into his life, philosophy and politics.

23.00
News Update/
World Business Today
24 hours of world business news distilled into 30 minutes.

CNN
INTERNATIONAL

The 1,000 most traded National Market securities
In terms of dollar value, updated twice a year.
The Associated Press.

Law	Latent	High	Sales	Stock	Other	Latent	Law
100	100	100	100	100	100	100	100
90	90	90	90	90	90	90	90
80	80	80	80	80	80	80	80
70	70	70	70	70	70	70	70
60	60	60	60	60	60	60	60
50	50	50	50	50	50	50	50
40	40	40	40	40	40	40	40
30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30
20	20	20	20	20	20	20	20
10	10	10	10	10	10	10	10
0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

Friday's 4 P.M. Close
The 150 most traded stocks of the day, up to the closing on Wall Street.
The Associated Press.

Line	Label	Charge
57	52
58	28
59	147
60	1
61	1
62	1
63	128
64	1
65	1
66	1
67	1
68	1
69	1
70	1
71	1
72	1
73	1
74	1
75	1
76	1
77	1
78	1
79	1
80	1
81	1
82	1
83	1
84	1
85	1
86	1
87	1
88	1
89	1
90	1
91	1
92	1
93	1
94	1
95	1
96	1
97	1
98	1
99	1
100	1
101	1
102	1
103	1
104	1
105	1
106	1
107	1
108	1
109	1
110	1
111	1
112	1
113	1
114	1
115	1
116	1
117	1
118	1
119	1
120	1
121	1
122	1
123	1
124	1
125	1
126	1
127	1
128	1
129	1
130	1
131	1
132	1
133	1
134	1
135	1
136	1
137	1
138	1
139	1
140	1
141	1
142	1
143	1
144	1
145	1
146	1
147	1
148	1
149	1
150	1
151	1
152	1
153	1
154	1
155	1
156	1
157	1
158	1
159	1
160	1
161	1
162	1
163	1
164	1
165	1
166	1
167	1
168	1
169	1
170	1
171	1
172	1
173	1
174	1
175	1
176	1
177	1
178	1
179	1
180	1
181	1
182	1
183	1
184	1
185	1
186	1
187	1
188	1
189	1
190	1
191	1
192	1
193	1
194	1
195	1
196	1
197	1
198	1
199	1
200	1

Friday's 4 P.M. Close

[illegible]

Through a Long Le

مكتبة ابن الجوزي

Continued on Page 17

ghetti

though many residents rich money, they can ar y do not really know sd. Once, he said, he one out to buy a phone 514 each in the su-

MONEY:
's Fencing
d from Page 1

managers...phantoms yers, a group of se torneys "I probabl d or something." sh ow she had responde consider this exchange us others, as evidence was trying to obstruct friends to maintain a of a witness who aliber damaging test in the Paula Corsistent lawsuit prodding by Mr. Br made clear that s e entered to conce ship from the lawye r others, because s up, and that ave teaching, for your school of things, s lose emotions, & away with the you need to know estimony is truth never those mo estimony today"

d not quit. "Doy president, still he asked with no further speculate what he into the m centric racket that has minge many people the former Wh traveled by Mr. U. he world in a did not have seen woman, Mr. L.

ask he - a very city, and asked swayed, "I'm satisfied."

Her husband said into laughter of sparring Lewinsky by Patricia

...the president
...he called it
...occasion
...can you call
...responded
...ship
...all

...there
...with
...the ...what

...the only
...of all
...up all around
...up with ...compromise
...the app
...the app

1. Clinton in part's the House of some was asked at in his

...the pe
...outh wh
...low

...I feel
...together with
...truthful.
...to be w
...she m

... had
...
...
...
...
...

Mr. C. H. ...

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27
28
29
30 31 32 33 34 35
36 37
38 39 40
41 42
43 44
45
46 47 48
49
50 51
52 53
54
55
56 57
58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70 71
72 73
74
75 76
77
78
79 80
81
82 83
84
85
86
87
88 89
90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100
101
102
103
104
105
106
107
108
109
110
111
112 113
114
115
116
117
118
119
120
121 122
123
124
125 126
127 128
129
130 131
132
133
134 135
136
137
138
139
140
141 142 143
144
145 146
147
148
149
150 151 152
153
154 155 156
157
158
159
160 161
162
163
164
165 166
167
168 169
170
171
172 173
174 175
176 177
178
179
180 181
182
183
184
185
186
187
188
189
190
191
192
193
194
195
196
197
198
199 200 201
202
203
204
205
206 207
208 209
210
211
212 213 214
215
216
217
218
219
220
221
222
223
224
225
226
227
228
229
230
231
232
233
234 235 236
237 238 239
240
241
242
243 244
245 246
247
248
249
250 251
252 253 254
255
256
257
258
259
260 261
262
263 264
265
266
267
268 269
270
271 272
273
274
275
276
277
278
279
280
281 282 283 284 285
286
287
288
289
290
291
292
293
294 295
296
297
298
299 300
301 302
303 304
305
306
307
308 309
310
311 312
313
314 315
316
317
318
319
320
321 322
323
324 325
326
327
328
329
330
331
332
333
334
335
336
337
338
339 340
341
342
343
344 345
346 347 348 349
350 351
352
353
354
355
356
357
358
359 360 361
362
363
364 365
366
367
368
369
370
371
372 373
374
375
376
377
378
379
380
381
382
383
384
385
386
387
388
389
390
391
392
393
394
395
396
397
398 399
400
401
402
403
404
405
406
407
408
409
410
411 412
413
414
415
416
417
418
419
420
421
422
423 424
425
426 427
428 429
430 431
432 433
434
435
436
437
438
439
440 441
442 443
444
445
446
447
448 449
450
451
452
453 454
455
456
457 458
459
460
461 462
463 464
465
466 467 468 469
470
471
472
473
474
475
476
477
478
479
480
481
482 483
484
485
486
487
488
489
490
491
492 493
494
495
496 497
498
499 500 501 502
503 504
505
506
507
508
509
510
511
512
513
514
515 516
517
518
519
520
521 522
523
524
525
526
527
528
529
530 531
532
533
534 535
536
537
538
539
540
541
542
543 544
545
546
547 548 549
550
551 552 553
554
555
556 557
558 559
560
561
562
563
564
565
566
567
568 569 570
571
572 573 574 575
576
577
578
579 580 581
582
583
584 585 586
587
588
589
590
591
592
593
594
595
596
597
598
599
600
601
602
603
604
605
606
607
608
609
610
611
612
613
614
615
616
617
618 619
620
621 622
623 624
625
626 627
628 629
630 631
632 633 634
635
636
637
638 639
640
641
642
643
644
645
646
647
648
649
650
651
652
653 654
655
656
657 658
659
660 661
662
663
664 665
666
667
668
669
670
671
672
673
674 675
676
677
678
679
680 681
682
683
684 685
686
687
688 689 690
691
692
693
694
695
696
697 698
699
700
701
702
703
704
705
706
707
708 709 710
711 712
713
714
715
716
717
718
719
720
721
722
723
724 725
726
727
728 729
730 731
732
733 734
735
736 737 738
739
740
741
742
743
744 745
746
747 748
749
750
751
752
753
754
755
756 757
758 759
760
761
762
763 764
765
766
767
768
769
770
771
772
773
774
775
776 777 778
779
780
781 782 783 784
785 786
787
788 789 790 791
792
793 794 795 796
797
798
799 800
801
802 803 804 805 806
807
808
809
810
811
812
813
814 815
816
817
818
819
820 821
822 823
824
825 826
827 828 829
830 831
832
833 834 835
836
837
838
839 840
84

Continued from Page 15

ADC Communications Canada	Financial services	Michael Milne Michael Smith Michael Smith	Buy; strong position in growing market	Nov. 28	9.86	10.38	Procella Inc. (PRA) U.S.	Magazines publishing	Steve Brown Craig Smith Paul Smith	Buy; carefully targeted suburban, affluent mix of assets	Oct. 24	10.68	13
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Employment	Recovery Stage	Buy; will benefit from long-term trends	Oct. 31	2350	2650	Royal Bank of Canada (RY) Canada	Financial services	Dumery Best	Buy; strong player, good long-term stock	Oct. 26	76.0	78.10
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Financial services	Peter Canale	Buy; reasonably good value	Nov. 14	61.53	57	Royal Dutch/Shell Energy (RDSA) Britain	J.P. Morgan Securities	Buy; increased compared to Exxon	Oct. 3	40.61	36.25
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Paper	Roger Hanson	Buy; has hit bottom, may be a takeover candidate	Dec. 26	7.15	6.10	SAP AG (SAP) Germany	Software	Hans-Hell Berthel Berthel	Buy; underpriced, demand for product will grow	Dec. 28	557.14	395
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Software	William E. H. J. Morgan Securities	Buy; good new products in the software leasing opportunity; artificial stock holders stock price	Oct. 18	137.81	125	Schweitzer PLC (SWP) Britain	Financial services	Cassidy Bryan	Buy; should benefit from European privatization	Nov. 14	1112	1044
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Restaurants	Cassidy Bryan	Buy; stock is cheap	Nov. 14	670	800	Scientific Atlanta Inc. (SAI) U.S.	Communications equipment	Lester M. Brown BT Alex. Brown	Buy; cash-rich growth company	Oct. 17	94.88	31.23
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Financial services	Dumery Best	Buy; has foreign exposure, less competition than other top-tier banks	Dec. 28	24.50	23.45	Shanghai Expressway Co. (SEI) Hong Kong	Construction	Deutsche Securities Asia	Buy; company financials not sound, stock overvalued; see report	Oct. 31	1.75	1.53
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Consumer durables	Timothy W. J. Morgan Securities	Buy; cash-rich, no debt	Oct. 17	32.38	41.25	Shimano Inc. (SHI) Japan	Sporting goods	Just-Marie Friedland	Buy; inexpensive for a comfort company	Nov. 14	3050	2995
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Computer services	Dumery Best	Buy; good technology, high exposure to U.S.	Dec. 26	30.44	35.94	Siam Commercial Bank (SCB) Thailand	Financial services	Peter Scott John P. Scott	Asset; company will survive because of retail connections, but property is a long way off	Dec. 5	16.75	18
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Media	Richard Dale Michael Smith Barney	Buy; will benefit from digital TV	Oct. 24	25.50	23.50	Singapore Press Holdings (SPH) Singapore	Newspaper publishing	Ang Lay Pheng Goldman, Sachs	Buy; company is becoming more value-oriented	Oct. 24	14.20	15.20
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Insurance	Robert Stowell David Stowell	Buy; high dividend, solid insurance candidate	Dec. 26	42.13	30.75	Singapore Press Holdings (SPH) Singapore	Insurance	Kathleen Stoddard Steven S. Smith Barney	Asset; overvalued, will lose all insurance revenue in cable and satellite TV
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Energy	Wolfgang Pinner	Buy; undervalued to its peers	Nov. 7	81.38	79	SLM Holdings (SLM) U.S.	Financial services	Robert Stowell	Buy; will benefit from industry consolidation	Dec. 26	45.05	44
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Telecommunications	Michael Smith Michael Smith Financial Services	Buy; will benefit from modernization	Dec. 26	7130	8525	Sony Corp. (SONY) Japan	Consumer electronics	Kimberly Takano Richard B. Takano	Sell; uncertain profit outlook; unclear price pressure on stock price	Dec. 5	6890	8450
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Diversified manufacturing	Robert Friedman	Buy; undervalued	Dec. 26	28.44	29.25	South China Holdings Ltd. (SCH) Hong Kong	Newspaper publishing	Kathleen Stoddard	Buy; high dividend, high earnings, no debt; insurance company — the only player in town	Oct. 24	9.05	0.92
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Data transmission	Dow Theory Forecasts	Buy; cash-rich	Oct. 17	8.08	10.68	Ericsson Telecom. (ERIC) Sweden	Telecommunications	Eric Tostler Viktor Tostler	Buy; outstanding growth, excellent dividend yield
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Magazine publishing	Michael Smith Michael Smith Goldman, Sachs	Buy; carefully targeted market, good security business	Oct. 24	25.86	35.94	SPC Cos. (SPC) U.S.	Financial services	Robert Stowell	Buy; will benefit from industry consolidation	Dec. 26	35.86	28.38
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Energy	David Chen	Buy; a solid stock in a hot market	Dec. 26	74.50	75	STMicroelectronics NV (STM) U.S.	Semiconductors	Gary Schermerhorn	Buy; cheap earnings	Nov. 7	85.41	104.50
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Freight	Dow Theory Forecasts	Buy; cash-rich	Oct. 17	5.38	11.44	Suez Lyonnais des EA (SLY) France	Waste management	Michael Levy	Buy; management is doing everything right to create value for shareholders; stock is worth 1,400 (13.75) daily	Nov. 14	163.12	181.40
Adelphi Corp. (ATAD) Canada	Construction equipment	Neil George	Buy; will benefit from large homebuilding, management is cost-conscious, strong in the west zone	Oct. 31	60.78	52.10	Sun Microsystems Inc. (SUN) U.S.	Software	Gary Schermerhorn	Buy; cheap earnings	Nov. 7	81.19	111.75

Continued from Page 15

place in the clouds

Alcatel, the French telecommunications and engineering giant, has battled negative investor sentiment since last autumn, when it warned of lower third-quarter profit just after closing an all-stock acquisition of a U.S. company. On Jan. 28, the company posted a tidy profit increase for the fourth quarter, but because most of the gains came from asset sales, investors were unconvinced and the stock fell. Alcatel stock, which traded at about 110 euros in December, finished the period at 102.60 euros.

As for Sony. Kimihide Takano of Dresdner Kleinwort Benson, who recommended the electronics giant as, if anything, a long-term prospect, upgraded the stock from "sell" to "hold" in early January when he decided that the worst was over. The yen had hit its high of 108 to the dollar, and the stock was on its way to a low of 7,390 yen, reached Jan. 12. Sony shares have since rebounded, finishing the period at 8,450 yen, but Mr. Takano said that was probably about the top of their range for now. Sony recently announced a profit forecast for the year ending March 31 that implies that the company will post a fourth-quarter loss.

THE INTRODUCTION of the euro, or single European currency, on Jan. 1 seems to have contributed to the urge to merge, as European companies in particular seek partners to help them compete in the wider marketplace.

The new currency has also affected the tables that accompany this article. While share prices are quoted here in the currency of the exchange on which they trade, stocks traded in the 11-nation euro zone have been quoted in the new currency since Jan. 4, and their historical share prices have been restated by the stock exchanges at the reference rate set in December by the European Central Bank. (The euro-zone countries are Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal and Spain.)

It helps to bear this new financial geography in mind when reviewing certain stock picks. When Mr. Levy, for example, predicted in November that shares of the Spanish bank Argenta SA "should reach 4,000," he meant pesetas, not euros. The shares rose 21 percent in the period, to 77.56 euros — equivalent to 3,753.67 pesetas. Mr. Levy's view that a share of Suez Lyonnaise des Eaux SA was "easily" worth 1,400 French francs translates to about 213 euros — still a stretch from the stock's current level of about 180 euros.

N D J

Several companies recommended in the fourth quarter have since changed their names: Washington Water Power Inc., recommended Oct. 10, became Avista Corp., and MarketSpan Energy Corp., recommended Oct. 17, changed its name to KeySpan Energy Corp. Our tables reflect the new names.

Miki Tanikawa contributed to this article.

Swiss Group (SGL) Switzerland	Watchers	Debbie Bryan	Buy, stock is cheap	5/1/14	472.35	472	Thai Reinsurance Insurance (THAI) (THAILAND)	Rosemary Sagar	Buy, inventory is high	Oct 31	7.7	17.20
		Jacques-Franck Dozan	Buy, better than peers in use of capital and creation of shareholder value	Dec 12	469.31		TNT Post Group (TNT) (Netherlands)	Stephen Lee AFM Asset	Buy, stock is cheap, but subject to growth after mergers	Dec 31	22.50	6.11
Tokai Chemical Industries Ltd. (4500) Japan	Chemicals	Matthew Levy	Buy, an improving plant promotes a strong company	5/1/14	402.9	4150	USCC Inc. (USCC) U.S.	Matias	Buy, high market share value is driving	5/1/14	4.11	14.71
Tokai Nippon Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	8.82	11.20	VA Technology AG (VATC) Austria	William Parker	Buy, undervalued company as a peer	5/1/14	27.70	10.72
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yodanis Group PLC (YOD) (Belgium)	Telecommunications Nora Shaheen Bongor Paréus	Buy, stock is discounted, margin growth drives an increase in profits	Oct 31	6.20	17.55
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31	24.1	11.17
Toll Performance SA (TNP) (Switzerland)	Telecommunications	David Chan	Buy, a solid stock in a rally market	Dec 26	17.30	23	Yoshida Holdings Ltd. (YHD) Hong Kong	Consumer electronics Mark Sauter Deutsche Stuttgart, Asia	Buy, undervalued company, not a 1P or a core play	Oct 31

For information please contact:

Katy Hour: Fax (33-1) 41 43 92 12 or e-mail: funde@rt.com

To receive free daily quotations for your

Quotations supplied by fund groups to: STANDARD & POOR'S MICROPAL, t 33-1 40 28 09 08, e-mail: lhedata@micropal.com funds subscribe at: e-funds@iht.co

February 5, 1999

<http://www.iht.com/IHT/FUN/funds.html>

[illegible]

WORLD ROUNDUP

India Takes Control

CRICKET Anil Kumble and Harbhajan Singh, two spin bowlers, took advantage of a turning pitch as India bowled out Pakistan for 172 Friday in its first innings on the second day of the second test in New Delhi. India reached 46 for the loss of one wicket in its second innings to lead by 126. (Reuters)

Coez Beats Davenport

TENNIS Lindsay Davenport, the defending champion and top seed, was upset by Amanda Coetz of South Africa, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, on Friday in the quarterfinals of the Toray Pan Pacific Open in Tokyo.

Davenport's loss means that Martina Hingis, who beat Steffi Graf, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, can get back to the top of the WTA rankings by beating Jana Novotna in the semifinals.

Petr Korda, who tested positive for a steroid at Wimbledon, was banned Friday by the Czech Tennis Association from playing in his home country for a year. (Reuters)

Wilkins Joins Orlando

BASKETBALL Dominique Wilkins, eighth on the NBA's career scoring list, signed with the Orlando Magic. Wilkins, 39, last played in the NBA during the 1996-97 season. (AP)

Irish Say 'No' to Big 10

COLLEGE SPORT Notre Dame decided at a meeting in London on Friday not to join the Big Ten conference, maintaining the 111-year independence of its football program and ensuring it will not have to share its TV revenue. (AP)

Hong Kong Jails Jockey

HORSE RACING A Hong Kong court sentenced a jockey to 12 months in jail on Friday after he pleaded guilty to race-fixing charges. Choi Chun-wai, 27, admitted accepting $150,000 Hong Kong dollars ($19,000) in March 1996 for rigging in a race, the Independent Commission Against Corruption said. (Reuters)

Top Teams Look Past Five Nations Rugby

Favorite France Says World Cup Is True Goal

By Mitch Phillips
Reuters

LONDON—Even though it produced tries galore, record victories and a second consecutive Grand Slam for France, the Five Nations rugby union championship last season was undermined by the gap between the teams.

France and England were so far ahead of the three Celtic nations that the title was always going to be decided by the result of their meeting on the opening day.

This time the two favorites do not clash until the third round of matches on March 20 at Twickenham. Although it is likely to be the match that decides the championship, the rest of the pack appear to have closed the gap.

Whatever happens, though, over the two months of action, the tournament this year is fighting for an identity other than a World Cup warm-up.

France is bidding to become the first country to win three successive Grand Slams, but clearly that is the secondary goal.

"Of course, we are ambitious in such a year, but we will take the games one after the other," said Jean-Claude Skrela, the French coach, speaking almost nine months before the World Cup begins. "We are entering the tournament with all the attention required but our goal, the only one, is the World Cup."

France warmed up for the defense of its title by thrashing Italy, 49-24, in Genoa last week. The Italians, who enter the tournament next season, will shadow it this year with games against all combatants except England.

France was awesome last season but fell away to lose to Australia in November.

Rather than glorying in back-to-back Grand Slams, Skrela instead concentrated on that 32-21 defeat.

"We had a very good year except for the last 20 minutes against Australia," he said. "We still have to improve and avoid mistakes which are damaging."

England's mistakes in Paris cost it the title last year. The biggest challenge for Clive Woodward, the England coach, is to cut them out and find some consistency.

In November, England scored a memorable victory over South Africa, just a week after giving an awful display in scrapping past Italy, 23-15.

England has the capacity to win the tournament but it is also quite capable of getting it all wrong.

"We know we messed up badly last year and we are determined not to make the same mistakes again," Woodward said.

The off-field chaos that briefly removed England from the Five Nations this year will have had no effect on the team, and English bookmakers make it slight favorites (6-5) ahead of France (Evens).

England starts its campaign with the Calcutta Cup match against Scotland at Twickenham on Feb. 20.

Before that, Scotland, the tournament's 50-1 outsider, begins with a home game at Murrayfield against Wales on Saturday in which the result may not be as important as the size of the crowd.

Fewer than 40,000 turned up to see the Scots lose to South Africa, the world champion, in November, and continuing indifference could spell disaster for the sport torn apart by in-fighting in Scotland.

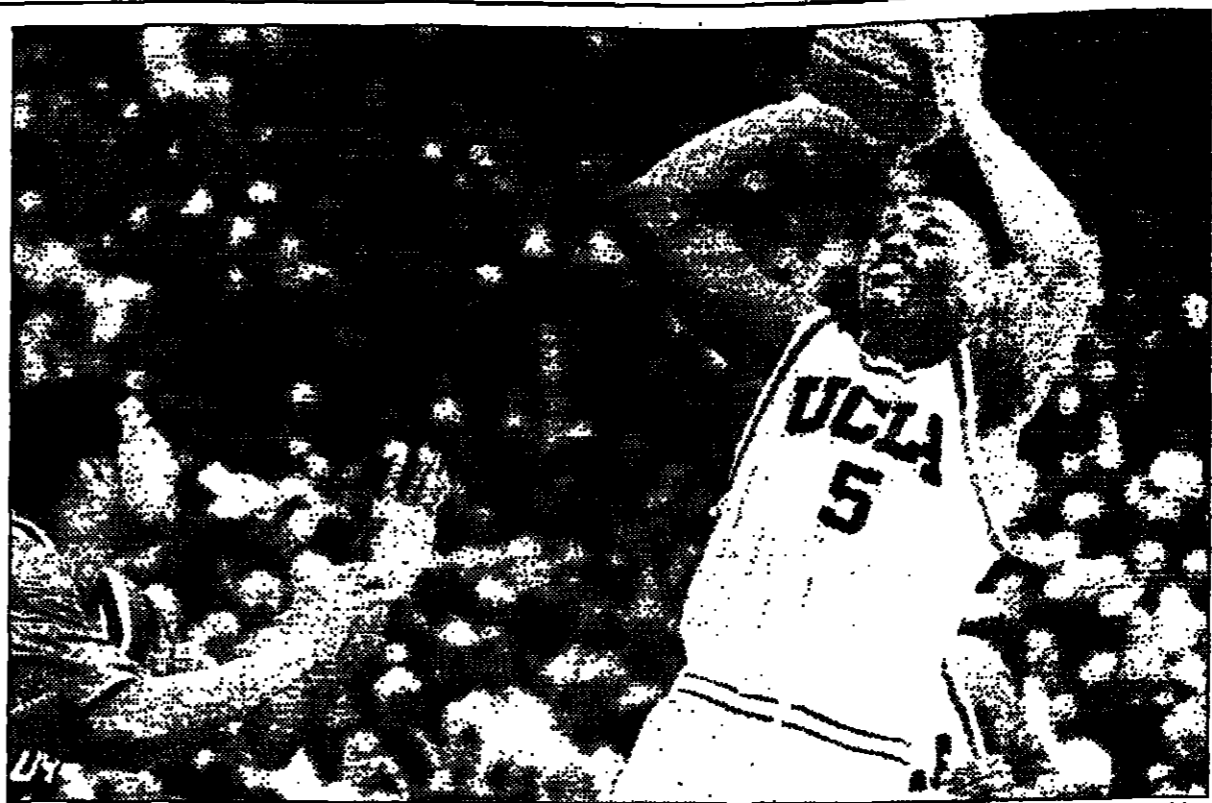

Support has never been a problem for Ireland, and tickets will be like gold dust for its opener in Dublin on Saturday against France.

Under its new coach, Warren Gatland, a New Zealander, Ireland gave the French a huge fright before eventually succumbing 18-16 in the Stade de France last year.

Ulster's victory in the European Cup, beating three top French clubs along the way, has added to the buoyant feeling in the Irish camp. But Ireland has not beaten France since 1983.

Wales is also on an upward trend. Despite conceding 145 points in its four games last year, including 60 to England, Wales finished third in the table after beating Scotland and Ireland.

The Welsh will again play their home games at Wembley in London while the National Stadium in Cardiff is rebuilt for the World Cup, and the last game of the tournament is there, on April 11, against England.

Baron Davis taking the winning buzzer shot over Alex Scales in UCLA's 79-77 victory over Oregon.

Freshman Shines as Florida Upsets Kentucky

The Associated Press
Freshman Mike Miller scored 20 points as Florida stunned Kentucky, 75-69.

Florida (16-4, 7-3 SEC) opened a 14-point lead midway through the second half and withstood a late Kentucky rally.

The fifth-ranked Wildcats (19-5, 8-2) were one of four ranked teams to lose on the road Thursday night.

Washington 90, No. 10 Arizona 84
Donald Watts scored 24 points and Deon Lutton added 20 as Washington defeated Arizona.

Washington (13-7, 6-4 Pac-10) built a 17-point lead early in the second half, then held off Arizona (15-4, 7-3).

Clemson 78, No. 12 North Carolina 63
Terrell McIntyre scored 25 points as Clemson snapped a six-game losing streak by upsetting North Carolina.

Clemson (13-9, 2-6) started fast and made every big shot down the stretch.

North Carolina (18-6, 6-4 ACC) committed 17 turnovers.
No. 13 UCLA 79, Oregon 77
UCLA edged Oregon on a 14-foot buzzer-beater by Baron Davis, who would have been suspended for the game had he not apologized for blaming a recent loss on a referee.

Davis dribbled down the court and hit a high, arching fadeaway at the buzzer.

He also had a key steal with 22.6 seconds left that helped UCLA (16-5, 7-3 Pac-10) tie the game after trailing by four twice in the final 1:49.

Carson Cunningham scored 23 points and Jarraan Cornell had 22 as Purdue (16-6, 4-4 Big Ten) beat Iowa following an eight-day break.

J.R. Koch led Iowa (15-5, 6-4) with 20 points.

BOOKS

Where Have You Gone, Starlight Café?

By William Anderson. 144 pages.
$24.95. Anderson & Sons.
Reviewed by William Grimes

IN the days before fast-food chains, roadside dining was a hit-or-miss affair. The inviting café just off the highway could be the home of truly delicious cuisine. On the other hand, it could be the White Rose Diner, a tiny white rectangle in Hannibal, Missouri, whose dinner included a choice of smothered chicken and dumplings, prime rib or T-bone steak served with green beans, new potatoes in cream, asparagus vinaigrette, a beverage and ice cream. When the White Rose opened in 1938, the price for this spread was 65 cents.

The diners and roadside cafés are mostly gone, but Will Anderson headed out to find them anyway. Clutching a stack of old postcards, he traveled 14,000 miles (22,400 kilometers) of back road, determined to ferret out the history behind the little mom-and-pop joints that fed millions of Americans on the move. His findings, along with the postcards, are on display in "Where Have You Gone, Starlight Café?"

The book, which Anderson published himself, is a little like the subject: quirky, haphazard and highly personal. There is no Starlight Café, for example. Anderson simply lists the sound of it. Title aside, the author researched local records to construct a biography for each of the 40 cafés and diners in the book, but his basic research technique was to roll into a town like Waycross, Georgia, look for old people and quiz them.

Waycross was easy. Who could forget the Green Frog, a drive-in that served frogs' legs? Its motto was "Service With a Hop."

Not all the quotations are electrifying. One interviewee, searching his memory for a bright vignette, told Anderson that the Raleigh Grill in Elizabeth City, North Carolina, had "slow-turning fans."

Anderson honors the humble and the grand. He finds space for Earl's Sandwich Shop in Waterloo, Illinois, a converted gas station where the hamburgers cost a nickel in the 1930s and '40s, and the Griddle Café in Plainview, Texas, a white stucco joint whose owners baked their own rolls and fruit cobblers.

His more grandiose finds include the Dutch Mill Village in Glasgow, Kentucky, a restaurant in the shape of a windmill that featured "Kentucky Kuisine" and a half-dozen windmill-shaped motel cabins out back.

The book has a certain poignancy. Most of the restaurants have long since disappeared, done in by the interstate highway system and the rise of national chains. Anderson traces each story to the bitter end, and in some cases includes photographs of the old spots as they now appear. It is not a pretty sight, but Anderson, for all his love of the old ways, seems to be a realist.

"Was the food any better in the real McCoy?" he writes. "Maybe yes. Maybe no. Maybe so."

New York Times Service

HIDDEN ZOO By Nancy Nicholson Joline

ACROSS	73 Pop's Caline	4 Church vessel	120 Hallelujah	123 Family tree word
1 El	74 Gave a rest	5 Second, e.g.	121 Rock composer	125 Year in Antiquities
6 It helps you see plays	77 "Beloved" director, 1998	6 Scintilla	122 The Man
11 N.L. batting champ, 1964, '65 and '67	78 Woman's shoe	7 John of London
12 Synthetic fiber	81 Synthetic fiber	8 Cross to bear
19 Dish sometimes served with bacon	82 Some TV drama sets	9 Keep track of
20 Kind of roll	85 Pan-fry	10 Hospital figure
21 House style	86 Peels	11 Hospital aims
22 Active again	87 Much-discussed sociopolitical phenomenon	12 Unguided
24 Way out, counterintuitive	90 Like the White Rabbit	13 Dash
25 Kind of strength	92 Movie following, maybe	14 Melancholic
26 It won't hold water	93 Pennsylvania	15 Calendario part
28 Old cat	94 Legendary fashion editor	16 Suffix with neat
29 Figure of Arthurian legend	95 Scottish river known for its salmon fishing	17 Iwona do
30 Strains	100 1985-87 Miss All-Star	18 Bishop of
32 — as Sharnah	101 N.Y. Knicks' coach	19 Novelist
35 La Fenice productions	102 Some dummies	20 Width specification
36 Wrap	103 Sunk ship	21 Penthouse feature
40 Somerset Maugham's "Besters"	104 Trading letters	22 Skinky-dipping
43 Rally	105 Raised	23 Skinky-dipping
45 Diner owner in "Beverly Hills 90210"	106 "Hand it over!"	24 Skinky-dipping
46 One of the newly rich	107 Holidays	25 Skinky-dipping
50 Ear, station	108 Old of musical	26 Skinky-dipping
51 North Carolina county named for a Revolutionary War commander	109 Unremarkable	27 Skinky-dipping
53 "A Doll's House" writer	110 Place to crouch	28 Skinky-dipping
54 Peak resort time	111 Member	29 Skinky-dipping
56 Two in the news	112 "A Passage to India" question	30 Skinky-dipping
58 Ring-shaped	113 "The House of Blue Leaves" playwright	31 Skinky-dipping
61 — high	114 Cry of disagreement	32 Skinky-dipping
62 They're done for tests	115 Arrested	33 Skinky-dipping
63 Describe	116 Satisfactory marks	34 Skinky-dipping
65 Persian Gulf emirate	DOWN	35 Skinky-dipping
67 Cruise out	1 Superabundance	36 Skinky-dipping
69 Korean autos	2 Ready	37 Skinky-dipping
70 Box mot	3 Sen. Bayh	38 Skinky-dipping

SCOREBOARD

ICE HOCKEY

NHL STANDINGS

EASTERN CONFERENCE
ATLANTIC DIVISION
Philadelphia	28	10	43
New Jersey	29	15	44
Pittsburgh	24	15	39
N.Y. Rangers	20	23	43
N.Y. Islanders	16	31	46
NORTH EAST DIVISION
Toronto	27	19	46
Ottawa	27	15	42
Buffalo	24	16	40
Boston	20	21	41
Montreal	19	25	44
SOUTHEAST DIVISION
Carolina	23	19	42
Florida	19	12	31
Washington	18	26	44
Tampa Bay	11	35	46
WESTERN CONFERENCE
CENTRAL DIVISION
St. Louis	25	21	46
St. Louis	19	19	38
Nashville	18	27	45
Chicago	14	29	43
NORTHWEST DIVISION
Edmonton	19	21	40
Calgary	16	27	43
Vancouver	16	28	44
PACIFIC DIVISION
Dallas	20	30	50
Phoenix	22	12	34
Anaheim	18	22	40
San Jose	16	21	37
Los Angeles	18	28	46

BASKETBALL

U.S. COLLEGE SCORES

THURSDAY RESULTS MEN
Top 25
No. 5. Kentucky (19-5) lost to Florida 75-68.
No. 10. Arizona (15-4) lost to Washington 90-84.
No. 12. UCLA (16-4) lost to Clemson 75-63.
No. 13. UCLA (16-4) lost to Oregon 77-79.
No. 14. Iowa (15-5) lost to Purdue 64-69.
LEADING COLLEGES
Boston U. 63, New Hampshire 52
Southern Cal. 90, Siena 90, UT
Marquette 75, Wake Forest 75
UConn 75, North Carolina 75
Rhode Island 73, Massachusetts 62 WOMEN
Top 25
Temple 67, Dayton 54
UConn 59, St. Joseph's 53
Louisville 76, Memphis 76
Drake 73, Indiana St. 63
Loyola, Ill. 72, Detroit 69
Northwestern 68, Michigan 34
Vanderbilt 64, Missouri-Kansas City 73
Ala.-Birmingham 90, Houston 82
Arizona St. 69, Washington St. 64
Cal State 64, Rice 55
Fresno St. 57, San Jose St. 52
Iowa St. 50, Iowa 47
San Diego 73, Gonzaga 59
Southern Cal. 69, Oregon 61
St. Mary's, Cal. 50, Portland 41
Texas-St. Paul 76, Hawaii 66
Wyoming St. 66, Tulsa 61

TRANSITIONS

BASEBALL

AMERICAN LEAGUE
DETROIT	Agreed to terms with RHP Todd Jones on a 3-year contract.
MINNESOTA	Agreed to terms with RHP Mike Timlin on a 1-year contract.
NATIONAL LEAGUE
ST. LOUIS	Traded INF Ralph Mulford to Cincinnati for RHP Mark Curry.
BASEBALL ASSOCIATION
CLEVELAND	Signed F Roy Rogers. Put F Ryan Stock on injured list.
ST. LOUIS	Traded F Todd Porter to the Utah Jazz for 24-round 2000 draft pick.
ST. LOUIS	Traded C Todd Lunde to the Pittsburgh Pirates for C Jeff Brubaker.
ST. LOUIS	Traded C Jeff Brubaker to the Pittsburgh Pirates for C Todd Lunde.
ST. LOUIS	Traded C Todd Lunde to the Pittsburgh Pirates for C Jeff Brubaker.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

Barbados 3, Bermuda (third division) 0
Barbados won 4-0 on aggregate.

CRICKET

FOURTH ROUND, RETURN LEG

SPORTS

Bitter Words With the Croissants

Threat and Counterthreat at an Angry Breakfast of Olympians

By William Drozdiak
Washington Post Service

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The 42 members of the International Olympic Committee who gathered for breakfast with the IOC's executive board Wednesday in the ornate Palace Hotel were angry and annoyed. They wanted answers to a lot of hard questions.

Why were they being punished for the sins of a few miscreants? Why were they being kept in the dark about the repercussions of the bribery scandal? Most of all, why were they being stripped of their most prized privilege: the right to choose the Olympic city?

According to several participants who agreed to provide a detailed account of the session under a cloak of anonymity, the 90-minute confrontation between the Olympic governing board and the IOC members was one of the most raucous and emotional encounters in the history of an organization that prides itself on an image of harmonious fraternity under its autocratic ruler, Juan Antonio Samaranch.

The rash manner in which the executive board has tried to repair the damage from the Salt Lake City bribery scandal has provoked an unprecedented display of rebellion in the ranks. The discontent may burst into public view at an emergency session of the entire IOC membership body called by Samaranch for March 16-18. At the world doping summit sponsored by the IOC that concluded here Thursday, several members said they expected the meeting might turn into a donnybrook of new accusations and bribery revelations that could cause the scandal to escalate to unimaginable levels.

The session at the Palace Hotel came after Shengrong Lu, a lecturer in linguistics at Beijing University and head of the world badminton federation, demanded to know why Samaranch refused to meet with IOC members attending the doping conference to explain his actions in the bribery scandal.

Samaranch begged off but urged board members to convene a breakfast session in which the board would offer a full explanation behind the resignation of four members, the suspension of five others and a proposal to have a 15-person panel — of whom only eight would be IOC members — to select the host city of the 2006 Games.

Samaranch was said to believe his absence would encourage greater candor among the members. But as one participant put it, "The old man knew what kind of anger would be in the air and he wanted no part of it."

The first to speak was Franco Carro, a respected Italian politician. He questioned why those members whose honesty was above reproach would be forced to surrender their votes. The board members remained silent.

Zhenjiang He, a Chinese government minister who was one of Samaranch's first vice presidents, followed by saying the actions by the executives were hasty and misconceived. He warned that attempts to prove to the public that the IOC was cleaning house could backfire if the most worthy members decided that serving on the IOC no longer mattered without voting rights.

The board remained silent as other members blew off steam. Then two vice presidents, Keba Mbaye of Kenya and Dick Pound of Canada, spoke. They said the most important thing was to support Samaranch at a time when he is being hammered in the press and being urged to retire two years ahead of the expiration of his fifth mandate.

Mbaye said that if Samaranch were forced to go, the IOC would be thrown into turmoil by a self-destructive fight for his succession. It is known that daggers are drawn between Pound and Kim Un Yong, a former South Korean intelligence officer who is under scrutiny for helping a Russian student get a scholarship from Salt Lake City boosters.

Kim says Pound, who conducted the IOC investigation into the scandal, has tried to impugn his reputation to eliminate all opposition and secure his position as heir apparent.

But what brought any thoughts of an insurrection to a screeching halt was another note of caution from the board. The IOC members were reminded that 66 of them had paid visits to Salt Lake City and that all of them were almost certainly under review by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. If they needed legal or other assistance in coping with the U.S. Justice Department inquiry, they should realize it might be in their own interests not to rock the IOC boat.

The breakfast session then adjourned peacefully.

FBI Investigating Tickets

First-class airline tickets that could be traded for cash were used as a form of currency by Salt Lake City bid organizers as they tried to win favor with IOC members, according to officials familiar with investigations. The Washington Post reported from Washington.

FBI agents and Olympic ethics investigators are examining evidence that the tickets were used to disguise illicit payments to IOC members whose support was critical to Salt Lake City's bid for the 2002 Olympics.

Some tickets were cashed in or traded for less-expensive fares, the officials said. Investigators are examining whether there was an understanding between some IOC members and the Salt Lake organizers that the tickets would serve as a payoff in return for support of the city's Olympic bid, officials said.

Investigators have focused on nearly $4.6 million in travel expenses spent by the Salt Lake committee during its campaign for the 2002 Winter Games.

Darren Langdon, left, of the New York Rangers and Donald Brashear of the Vancouver Canucks battling.

On the Road, the Devils Remain Hot

The Associated Press

The New Jersey Devils are proof that home ice is not much of an advantage in the National Hockey League.

The NHL's best road team continued to do their thing Thursday night, winning, 2-0, in St. Louis. "We're very fortunate that we've been strong on the road," said Scott Stevens, a defenseman, after the Devils.

NHL ROUNDOUP

ils won a team-record fifth straight away from home.

The Devils are third overall with 64 points, thanks to their 18-7-1 road record. They are not as dominating at home, with an 11-8-5 record.

Chris Terrier, the backup goalie, made 36 saves for his ninth career shutout as the Devils beat the Blues. Brian Rolston scored in the first period and added an empty-netter for the Devils.

Flyers 5, Canadiens 2 Mikael Renberg and Valeri Zelepukin scored 28 seconds apart in the third period as Philadelphia won at home against Montreal.

The Flyers have lost just once in 23 games since they ended a seven-game winless streak on Nov. 14.

Islanders 5, Bruins 4 Felix Potvin stopped 37 shots in Boston for his first victory for the Islanders, and New York extended the Bruins' winless streak to seven games.

Potvin had lost five straight since he came to the Islanders in a trade with the Toronto Maple Leafs on Jan. 9.

Rangers 6, Canucks 4 Wayne Gretzky reached another goal-scoring milestone and set up Adam Graves for a pair of first-period scores as New York beat visiting Vancouver.

Gretzky scored his 1,071st goal as a pro, tying him with Gordie Howe for most total career goals combining regular season and playoffs in the NHL.

and World Hockey Association. Gretzky beat Garth Snow at 10:21 of the second period after taking a cross-ice pass from Petr Nedved, giving the Rangers a 4-0 lead. The goal was the eighth of the season for Gretzky.

Coyotes 3, Sharks 1 Rick Tocchet scored two goals as Phoenix beat San Jose in the opener of the Sharks' 10-game road trip.

Jyrki Lumme also scored for the Coyotes, who extended their unbeaten streak to six games.

Predators 2, Flames 2 In Calgary, Andrei Nazarov scored from a sharp angle just 37 seconds into the third period to give the Flames their third 2-2 tie in as many games.

Kings 3, Blackhawks 2 Donald Audette put Los Angeles ahead to stay midway through the third period with his second goal of the game, and Steve Duchesne, a defenseman, had a goal and two assists as the Kings beat visiting Chicago.

Aid Mistaken for Bribes, African Says

By Ian Fisher
New York Times Service

NAIROBI — What is the difference, Charles Mukora wondered, between a sincere offer to help athletes in a poor nation and a bribe?

"I don't know," said Mukora, 64, who has found himself portrayed as a villain in the Olympic bribery scandal.

"Perhaps you can tell me?" Mukora resigned last month as a member of the International Olympic Committee after being accused of accepting $34,650 for his personal use from officials in Salt Lake City seeking to steer the 2002 Winter Games their way. He admits to taking the cash.

But Mukora, who was one of more than 100 officials from around the world who decide where to award the lucrative designation of Olympic site, contends that the money went solely to train distance runners at a camp he owns that faces the gorgeous snowy cap of Mount Kenya.

Disputing the conclusions of the Olympic committee that investigated him, Mukora says his only crime is to have been caught in an inevitable conflict. He is from a poor nation — and from Africa, like three other of the six expelled committee members — with little money to train athletes but with the power to help decide where the Games will be held.

"If you travel to a rich country or people from rich countries visit you, you more or less point out the areas you want to develop," said Mukora, who insisted he had never promised his vote to anyone. "Usually, the likely thing, they will suggest, 'We can do this or this.' And usually they offer to do something."

Olympic officials acknowledge the logic of Mukora's argument. It is no accident, they say, that Olympic committee members from Africa and South America have found themselves caught up in the scandal, and it does not mean that Africans or others from underdeveloped countries are more disposed to corruption.

As the Olympics have grown, cities around the world have become aggressive in trying to win the rights to stage the Olympics. At the same time, the Olympic committee responsible for awarding the Games has expanded to include more and more members from countries that often have no chance of staging the Games themselves.

The neediest countries, said Keba Mbaye, an IOC member from Senegal who was on the commission that investigated the Salt Lake City bid, are those most vulnerable to inducements. That kind of targeting of members and their votes has not been helped, officials concede, by the imprecise guidelines laid out by the IOC. The rules allow cities to offer aid to sports pro-

Solo Sailors Prepare for Cape Horn

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — They ran into a whale, a sandbar and dozens of monster waves. The amount of broken sailing equipment could have filled a small warehouse. For the solo sailors in the Around Alone yacht race, it's half the globe conquered, half still to go.

The sailors set out again Saturday on the third leg of the nine-month, 27,000-mile (43,200-kilometer) competition, leaving Auckland, New Zealand, to challenge the icy seas and hurricane-strength winds around Cape Horn as they race to Punta del Este, Uruguay.

Isabelle Autissier of France has the overall lead — 24 hours 10 minutes 9 seconds ahead of Giovanni Soldini of Italy, the winner of the second leg. Just reaching Auckland was a victory for Autissier, who had to be rescued by helicopter off Australia in 1994 — the last time this race was held — when her 60-foot (20-meter) yacht was dismasted and then sank in a fierce storm.

"We will probably see icebergs; the important thing is not to do the slalom between them," Soldini said. "That is really too dangerous and stupid."

Still, it will be hard to match the roller-coaster ride of the of the second leg that began in Cape Town.

Mike Golding of Britain, who won the first leg, was leading the second when his yacht hit a sandbar 200 miles (320 kilometers) from Auckland. He needed a tow, which disqualified him from the leg.

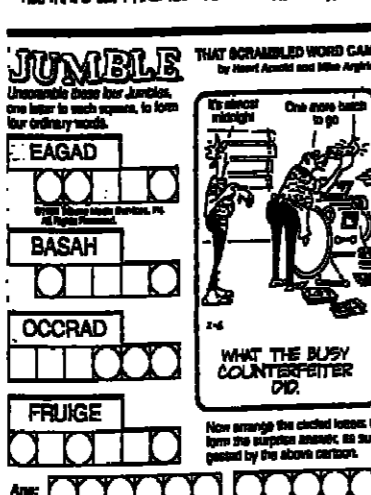

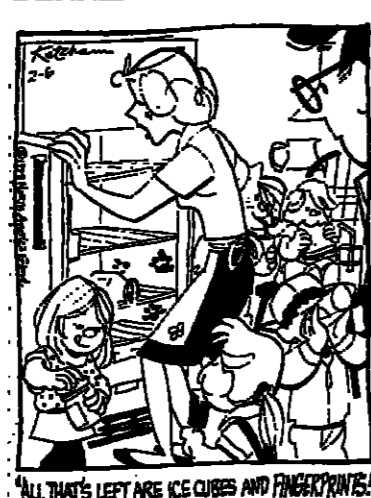

Autissier's yacht was knocked down by a wave shortly after leaving Cape Town. When the boat righted, she could barely raise her sail halfway up the mast and fell hundreds of miles behind, detouring to Tasmania for repairs. When her competitors became becalmed in the Tasman Sea, she passed them.

J. P. Mouligne, a Frenchman, closed a gap of 1,000 miles (1,600 kilometers) by slicing through the light air of the Tasman Sea. He won Class II, for boats 40 to 50 feet, and even beat some of the 60-footers, an almost unheard-of feat for a boat with a much smaller sail.

The next two competitors in Class II arrived just 2 minutes 21 seconds apart after more than a month of sailing. Mike Garfield of Britain beat Brad Van Liew of the United States in the last five miles.

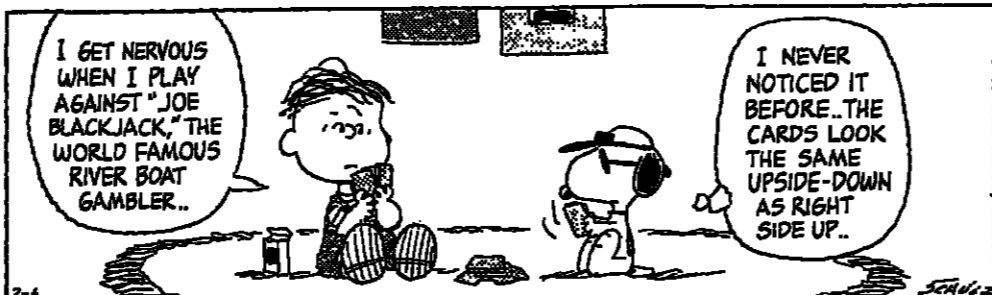

Fedor Konionukhov, a Russian who conquered both the North and South poles and Mount Everest, never did get the hang of sailing upwind. He arrived Sunday, a day after the cutoff to stay in the competition. Undaunted, he plans to continue sailing after repairs and a meeting with his hero, Sir Edmund Hillary, the man who first climbed Mount Everest. "Even coming in last is winning," Konionukhov said.

DENNIS THE MENACE

RECRUITMENT Appears every Monday in The Internet.
To advertise contact Sonya Broadhead in our London office:
Tel.: +44 1 71 420 0325
Fax: +44 1 71 420 0538 or your nearest IHT office or representative.

PEANUTS

GARFIELD

BEEBLE BAILEY

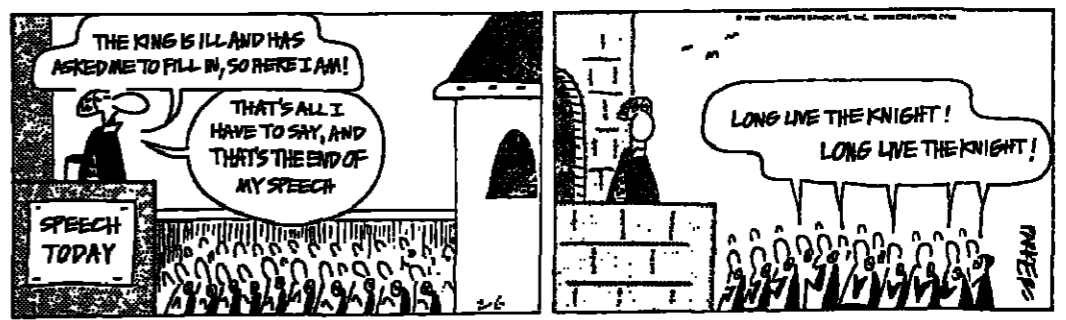

BLONDIE

CALVIN AND HOBBS

WIZARD of ID

NON SEQUITUR

That Doggone TV

Dogs do watch TV, and they are not impressed by the commercials.

Daisy is a beagle, which means she is, biologically, a nose with feet.

©1999, The Miami Herald
Distributed by Tribune Media Services Inc.

At lunch with friends, conversation goes all over the place, from the Monet show ("only he really looked at London, no one else got the mist rising from the Thames"), to automobiles with computerized maps ("but it's a good thing to get lost") to Sister Wendy, the art critic-nun whom he met at Sam Goldwyn's in Los Angeles. "All the other English art critics hate her because she gets the television," he said.

... my attempts to make portraits
... at any way, and of course there's always an element of caricature in that as there was in Picasso. I have looked at the work with some care and tried to see what I could do with push it, pull it, here, there. I admit I'm a bit nervous because to Diverse and eclectic are among

He finds it odd that his mother is 98 and keeping a beady eye on the health of her contemporaries, Barbara Cartland and the Queen Mother, while so many younger friends are dying or dead. "Life," he says, "is always giving me a new script."

The singer Faith Hill was nominated for seven awards Thursday, including "best female artist," topping all finalists for the TNN Music City News Country Awards. Hill's ebullient "This Kiss" was nominated for best single, video and song. Her duet with her husband, Tim McGraw, "Just to Hear You Say That You Love Me," scored nominations for best vocal collaboration and song. Her "Faith" will compete for best album against entries by Shania Twain, Alan Gene Siskel is giving his thumb a rest. The movie critic will take a leave of absence from the television show he shares with Roger Ebert to concentrate on his recovery from brain surgery. Siskel said Wednesday that he also will suspend his reviews for the Chicago Tribune, Chicago's WBBM-TV, CBS's "This Morning," and TV Guide.

Britain's Patent Office has rejected an application from the executors of the estate of Diana, Princess of Wales, to trademark her image. Her Memorial Fund had filed the application in October 1997, two months after the princess's death, to prevent the use of pictures on a vast range of unofficial merchandise.

(put on a happy face) and use AT&T Direct™ Service. With the world's most powerful network, you get fast, clear, reliable connections from anywhere. Plus you'll always have the option of an operator who speaks your language. All it takes is your AT&T Calling Card or credit card, and you're well on your way. So smile.

1. Just dial the AT&T Access Number for the country you are calling from.
2. Dial the phone number you're calling.
3. Dial your card number.

Austria ♦	012-903-011	Greece ♦	00-800-1311	Saudi Arabia ♦	1-800-100
Belgium ♦	0-800-100-10	Ireland ♦	1-800-535-000	Spain	906-99-00-1
Canada Republic	00-12-00-100	Israel ♦	1-800-94-94-94	Sweden	020-795-611
Egypt (Cairo)	0-10-0200	Italy ♦	172-1011	Switzerland ♦	8000-85-800
France	0-800-00101	Netherlands	080-000-1111	United Kingdom A ♦	8000-85-800
Germany	0120-0010	Russia (Moscow)	075-5042	United Kingdom B ♦	0200-63-001

For access numbers not listed above, ask any operator for AT&T Direct Service, or visit our Web site at: www.att.com/traveler

It's all within your reach.

Credit card calling subject to availability. Payment terms subject to your credit card agreement. Bold-faced countries permit country-to-country calling outside the U.S. Collect calling is available to the U.S. only. Country-to-country rates consist of the cost of a call to the U.S. plus an additional charge based on the country you are calling. You can call the U.S. from all countries listed above. *Pay phone deposit. †Limited availability. ‡Calling available to most countries. ††Public phones require local coin payment during the call. †††Dial "02" first, outside Calif. ††††Additional charges apply outside Mexico. ☐Use U.K. access number in N. Ireland. †††††Call does not complete; use 0800-013-0011. ©1996 AT&T

Timor Vote Be Scrubbed